The autumn fly is the most persistently pestiferous nuisance of the entire year

The palatable news has gone forth that oysters are remarkably good this season

"Foot furnishings" is the latest for all kinds of foot things—stockings, boots etc.

Some persons think it criminal to be seen with a straw hat after the first of October.

THE prospects grow brighter every day for the election of the entire Republican ticket.

The proper companion in life for seamstress would be a seamen—at least t seemster us that way.

IF Mr. Pattison is not defeated by a very large majority I shall be very much disappointed.—William A. Wallace.

QUITE a prominent democrat in Bellefonte has engaged a seat in Ishler's bos to make the trip on the 5th of November next.

IF the people of Centre county want honest administration in the commissioner's office they must vote for Strohm and Kunes. Men who refuse to pay their notes but let their endorser do it won't make good officers.

SINCE brother Meek has been nominated for State Senator he has suddenly found out that a man by the name of Kribbs, a lawyer and editor from Clarion has been nominated for Congress. Funny isn't it; when one comes to think that the Congressional conference was held several weeks ago.

"THE personal support of William A Wallace supplies a most beautiful trimming to the Pattison campaign. It is just beautiful," remarks a democrat contemporary. If our esteemed brother hadt tried hard he could not have been more facetious. It does indeed supply a very "beautiful trimming" but his entire support will not be substantial enough to make one single breadth of the shroud that Pattison will need after the election.

LAST week we called on the Watchman to go to Milesburg and hunt up the record of Mr. T. Frank Adams. It didn't do so but it seems a brother of Mr. Adams has given a partial record but still we say the "half has not been told." There is yet a long record—a very long record back, and before our neighbor again refers to him as having a "spotless record" it had better go and see about it, that's all.

Transfers of Real Estate.

Following are the transfers of real estate made in Centre county during the past week and entered for record in the Recorder's office, Bellefonte, Pa.

Jacob Fishburn's ex. to David Rhinesmith, lot of ground in Benner township.

Geo. W. Silknitter, et ux, to Michael Glenn, lot of ground in Snow Shoe.

Alphonso M. Barr to Claudia K. Barr, lot of ground in Bellefonte.

Robt. Lloyd, et ux, to James K. Myers, lot of ground in Philipsburg.

Patrick Dooley to Annie E. Krumbine, lot of ground in Bellefonte.

Same to Geo. W. Krumbine, lot of ground in Bellefonte.

Daniel Frantz to Jacob Frantz lot of ground in Worth twp.

Philip S. Dale, et ux, to Maggie Shafer, lot of ground in Gregg twp.

Geo. E. Ishler to Maggie Love, lot of ground in Potter twp.

Self made women are scarce, but the tailor made article suits us very well.

NEW YORK FASHIONS

MATERIALS; SILKS; CHILDREN'S FASHIONS, CLOAKS, MILLINERY.

Brading has captivated the fashionable world to such an extent that diogonal stripes, plaids and corded materials are the only ones upon which this beautiful garniture is not employed. A combination of fur and braiding is the latest and most fashionable dress trimming; for example, small squares otter or beaver fur are set at intervals in delicate braid patterns; or a straight band of fur or astrachan may border the front breadth with braiding above; so that these two important elements are united, the demands of fashion are satisfied and the garment is stamped as stylish.

Corded fabrics in plain colors are popular, especially Belford cord, so soft and rich that it needs no addition except velvet sleeves, collar and cuffs Bengaline de soie, a light-weight, medium priced corded silk is much in favor and closely resembles the ordinary repped silk. Drap de Socta, another new fabric, is somewhat heavier than surah or Indin silk, and will be very popular for evening wear, also numberless light colored silks in fine diagonals.

CHILDREN'S FASHIONS.

For children's dresses, nothing is more popular than Scotch plaids, as they afford such an endless variety and are so easily trimmed with narrow ribbon velvet, and also with the material used on the braids. "One-piece" dresses are also favorites, the neck being generally shirred with full sleeves to match. Braiding is as stylish for children's costumes as for grown people, and jacket pents richly braided in gilt, silver or steel, open over blouse waists in colored or white silk. Velvet ribbon and wide belt of velvet, impart character to dresses of India silk or other light material, with perhaps the addition of a handsome buckle. No passer-by ever passes Fifth Avenue and twenty-second Street without a look at the exquisitely fitted establishment just opened by Deutsch & Co., for the sale of children's suits and millinery, To New Yorkers, at present an elegance hitherto unheard of except in private houses, while strangers view with curiosity the unwonted sight. The assortment of cloaks and dresses is worthy the designers, whose garments from his wholesale house low down Broadway have hitherto been sold by leading retail merchants as importations. Now he comes out in true colors and is every day being more widely recognized as the American Worth. Ladies tea-gowns are delightful creations in rare fabrics and skilled combination.

CLOAKS.

Plush, matelass'e, plaids, beaver cloth in colors, and silk with brocaded velvet figures, are the most stylish materials for new cloaks. Passemeterie sleeves are entirely new this season, and are employed on cloaks and dresses in the most independent style: are generally wide and flowing, finished off with deep pendants; Matelass'e is shown in all the brown shades, heliotrope, blue, wine colors and black, with the addition of colored figures on black, and for evening wear in white and all light colors. The Newmarket shape retains its popularity, and admits of a pretty variety in open fronts tied together with heavy cord and tassel; a closed front of velvet or plush below. Astrachan is largely employed on all out door garments, and often in connection with velvet and passementerie, but an overload of trimming is never desirable and produces a sense of confusion.

THE MOST ECCENTRIC

taste in millinery may be gratified and yet keep within fashionable limits. Any one so disposed may put twenty ostrich tips on a broad brimmed hat, and three animal heads in fur on a small sized toque, and sally forth with perfect complacency. Feathers are employed to an unlimited extent especially the "Prince of Wales" feathers which are used on both front and back of round hats. Bands of feathers and also fur are placed around the brims of flare hats, and as there is an expanse of territory to be filled up, wide ribbon laid in graceful curves and folds, kept in place by gilt and jet pins, is a popular device. Embroidery, both open and raised is seen on new flare hats, with pretty and stylish effect.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From our regular Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Oct., 20, 1890.

The President will call an extra session of Congress. The President will not call an extra session. It depends altogether upon who you talk with which of the above statements will be positively made. I called on Secretary Halford at the White House to-day and tried to obtain something definite, but Mr. Halfard was courteously non-committal, and from his manner more than from what he said I came away with the idea that the President has not yet settled the question himself. There has been one fully attended cabinet meeting at which the subject in all its bearings was freely discussed, and from the best information obtainable, which of course isn't official, a marked difference of opinion as to the advisability of an extra session was developed. It is known that the President personally favors an extra session for the purpose of passing important legislation that cannot possibly be crowded into the short session without causing some of the regular appropriation bills to be crowded out which would necessitate the calling of an extra session, of the Fifty-second Congress which is to be elected next month, early in the Spring, and it is also known that a number of prominent republicans in and out of Congress are opposed to calling an extra session this fall, believing it better policy to attempt to pass all necessary legislation at the short session, and let the democrats take the responsibility of preventing it by filibustering tactics, if they dare. The idea that the President is compelled by law to issue a proclamation calling an extra session thirty days previous to the date upon which congress is to assemble, which had been generally accepted as correct, has been exploded. There is no law on the subject, except that contained in the constitution of the United States, which places the entire matter at the discretion of the President. So that Mr. Harrison, if he be so disposed, may call an extra session to meet within forty-eight hours after the date of his proclamation. Of course if an extra session is to be called it is probable that enough time will be given, between the date of the proclamation and the assembling of Congress, to enable members from the most distant districts to reach Washington in time to be present at the opening.

Admiral Porter, who returned to Washington last week dangerously ill, is now much better, and his physician hopes to have him out in a few days. The admiral is deservedly popular here, and the news of his serious illness caused great distress. He has long since passed the three score and ten post, but his rugged physique and the good health he usually enjoys furnishes good ground for the hope that he may continue at the head of the American Navy for at least another decade, and the Admiral himself told me last spring that he hoped to live long enough to see the vessels of the Navy manned by American seamen exclusively, instead of by foreigners, many of whom have never applied for naturalization papers, as at present.

Speaking of the Navy; advertisements have been issued by the Navy department inviting proposals for building a novel fighting ship, which will carry no guns. This vessel was designed by Rear Admiral Ammen, and will always be popularly known as the "Ammen Ram" although the department call', it a "harbor defense ram". The only weapons of the ram will be her powerful engines and a steal beak strong enough to disable any vessel afloat which it strikes when going at full speed. The vessel will be almost entirely under water which will make it extremely difficult for the enemy to disable her with guns.

Major General Nelson E. Miles, who is the military member of the commission recently created to negotiate with the Cheyenne Indians on the Tongue River reservation in Montana and on the Pine Ridge reservation in South Dakota for their removal and permanent settlement on any of the existing reservations, is here conferring with his civilian colleagues on the commission and with the interior department.

Civil Service Commissioner Roosevelt has returned from a six weeks' vacation which he spent on his cattle ranch in North Dakota. He tells a sh story that if persisted in will forever destroy his reputation for veracity.

The acting Superintendent of the Census has very naturally refused to order a recount of New York City unless a better reason can be given for asking it than the recent count made by Tammany Hall for the vowed purpose of gaining an additional Congressman under the new apportionment.

Secretary Tracy says the successor to the late Justice Miller will be a western man, but further than that he does not go.

Exploded Canards.

The political opponents of Senator Delemater appear determined to contribute the proper amount of material to insure him an unprecedented majority, since lie after lie is manufactured and placed on its travels only to come to an early and ignominious death—a fact that is telling largely to the Senator's advantage. The bottom facts are—no person in this community ever heard even a whisper in disparagement of George Wallace Delemater until after his nomination for governor, a fact which clearly proves the charge that we make that all the abuse heaped upon him has come from jealous rivals. In evidence of this assertion we point to the exploded campaign canards about his contemptuous treatment of he Odd Fellows, and his refus alto support John F. Morris in 1884 for county treasurer. The truth is the whole Delamater family voted and worked for John F. Morris' success both at the primary and general election; Morris was defeated by nearly 1,500 majority, a verdict of sufficient emphasis to convince any fair-minded person of his unpopularity with the Republicans of the county. It is true Mr. Morris was a gallant soldier; it is also true that he was severely wounded but it is equally true that he was generously rewarded for a period of nearly nineteen years--drawing from the county's strong box a sum estimated by those in position to know, all the way from $50,000 to $80,000. In addition to the sums drawn from the county treasury his name is and was borne upon the pension rolls and it can be asserted, without fear of successful contradiction, that had he taken proper care of his money he would to-day be in the possession of sufficient means to provide for himself and family. George Wallace Delemater had had nothing to do with his defeat in 1884; the people repudiated his claims for further recognition and Mr. Delamater was powerless to arrest the blow. These are the facts fairly and impartially stated; much more could be added but it is not necessary since the majority of our readers are fully aware of all the circumstances that contributed to his (Morris') defeat.

$600.00. Surplus Fees,

During every Democratic administration in he Recorder's office the people of Centre county were virtually fleeced of from six to seven hundred dollars. It was done in this way: Everytime a man, be he ever so poor, went into the office and asked to see a certain record he was charged for the trouble of showing it anywhere from 15 to 30 cents. These charges were all made illegally, as the law specifies that fees for recording only are to be collected. But for year and years this "sucking" process swen on and thousands upon thousands of dollars were thus illegally collected from the voters of Centre county.

But when John Harter was elected all this was stopped. He said no to all. Any man in Centre county can go in and have a record looked up now, or could at any time during Harter's term of office, and it wouldn't cost him a cent. Dr. Harter is an honest man and is not possessed of that greed that characterizes Democratic officials.

Now it is only just to conclude that were Morrison elected recorder this fall he would again start up this "little feet sucking" process and thereby rob the people of hundreds of dollars. Harter has been tried and the people know he won't [illegible] m again and when you want any information go in and get it and welcome and the doctor won't charge you a cent.

Marriage Licenses.

Following is the list of marriage licenses issued during the past week from the register's office, Bellefonte, Pa.:

James Mayes and Ida May Houck, both of Philipsburg, Pa.

George Ebsol and Annie Tomko, both of Snow Shoe, Pa.

W. T. Hubler and Adah E. Gramley, both of Rebersburg, Pa.

John W. Carron, of Tyrone, and May A. Murray, of Julian, Pa.

J. H. Price, of Stephen Co., Ill., and Mary E. Emerick, of Centre Hall, Pa.

James Walsh and Mary Jane Ashcroft, both of Cuba Mines, Pa.

Wm. C. Deitz, of Howard and Sallie Spotts, of Benner township, Pa.

Elsworth Vaughn, of Taylor township, and Nettie Stewart, of Penna., Furnace.

SHALL WE USE THEM, TO?

The Watchman last week foolishly attempted to explain its unwarrantable attacks on Sheriff Cooke and Commissioner Henderson by saying that it was "Using them for sample purposes." The Republicon party could put the official record of their respective terms of office up alongside the official record of any democratic Sheriff or Commissioner that that party might choose to put up and if the former would not show an administration run ten, yes twenty per cent more in the interest of the taxpayer than the latter, then we'll throw up the sponge.

Better not rake the buried ruins of the past out of the dirty record of your own party officers. They may not be generally known as yet but where the records of the various democratic officials of the past to be brought to light and placed side by side with that of the republican officials of the last two years and then the voters of Centre county would cast these ballots according as the two records proved to be to the interest of the masses the democratic party at the next election would not poll two thousand votes.

If the Watchman desires to run the campaign on records we bid it welcome and ask only one thing and that is tha the first record it gives is a true record of past democratic administration. By the time it gets through with that there will be a long list of names that will serve to "point a moral" and also made "to adorn a tail." Over taxation, high valuation, misappropriation, robbery, breach of trust, exorbitant charges, dishonest dealings, party favoritism, boodle, whisky, taunts and insults, these are a few of the long list that could be put down as the record of democratic officials. With decreased taxation, lower valuation, legitimate appropriation, fair and honest dealing, and we might name a hundred other things did we have the time, as the records of the republican officials. Now voters, which will you choose? Will you cast your ballot at the coming election for a party that can show up only the record of the first above mentioned or will you cast your ballot to continue in power a party that is a government "of the people and for the people?" The voters are not fools by any means and we have more confidence in Centre county voters than to think they will vote for the former.

Don't Be Fooled.

The democrats are busy this week fixing up a story to publish in defense of their man Adams for county commissioner. The man's own brother was honest enough to come out and tell what he knew about him and that was nothing very commendatory but, instead, it was a hard dose. Now, to fix things up Mr. Adams' attorneys are this week preparing a story, it is said, that will prove that the story published last week in regard to Frank Adams' ill treatment of his mother is only the result of a family quarrel and the other and more serious charge about the breach of trust of property entrusted to his charge is going to be disproved by his lawyers. Now this is all bunkum. If such a story be published the voters of Centre county may rest assured it will all be manufactured for the occasion and no reliance should be placed in it.

That Mr. Adams has done many things that unfit him for holding the office of county commissioner goes without saying and the democrats must not now try to make these people swallow a lie as well as a bitter pill, for it won't go down. The only way, under the circumstances, to do, is to vote straight for Strohm and Kunes.

Consistency, Thou Art a Jewel.

The Crawford Journal, of Thursday, Oct. 16, says:

The statement published by John F. Morris in relation to his defeat for county treasurer bears upon its face its own condemnation. When he says he told Mr. Delamater that he would "treat him fairly" if he would support him for the office at the primaries, Mr. Morris intends to convey the idea that that constituted a contract upon which he had a right to expect and ask pecuniary aid from Mr. Delamater at the general election. If he only agreed to treat Mr. Delamater "fairly" was he not also bound to treat the other banking houses fairly? If so, what right had he to make demand upon Mr. Delamater for pecuniary assistance any more than upon any other citizen? Was it simply on the promise that he would treat him fairly? In the common parlance of the day, that is "too thin" to "wash." "Promised to treat him fairly," and upon the strength of such a promise presumed to draw upon him for funds to run his campaign.

From another standpoint the statement has not a very savory character. Mr. Morris had been register and recorder of the county from 1864 to 1866, during the oil excitement in this county, when the business of the office was four or five times greater than it it is now. During his term as register and recorder Mr. Morris' income was not less than $25,000, as he had an income for reindexing the docket—a very profitable job. From 1872 to 1876 he was prothonotary of the county. His net income from that can be fairly estimated at $15,000. From 1879 to 1882 he was postmaster of this city, from which he received $10,000, making a grand total of $50,000 that he received from offices he had held as the gift of the republican party. Yet, in 1885, he was practically a bankrupt, and was asking pecuniary aid from Mr. Delamater because he (Morris) had agreed, if elected county treasurer, to treat Mr. Delamater fairly.

There is much more that might be said on this subject, but as we do not wish to descend to the level of personal scurility we shall not enter into the discussion of Mr. Morris' personal habits, which are so well known in this community.

To the medical fraternity it is a well known fact that the constant use of opiates has caused mental derangement to Captain Morris to such an extent that he is not accountable and could not be held responsible in a court of justice for his conduct or statements. Such a person becomes a subject of pity and commiseration, and for the protection of himself, his family and society he should be cared for in an institution for the treatment of such cases. It is not to be wondered at that such a person should become the victim and prey of designing political vultures in a political campaign of personal vilification, such as the present one seems to be on the part of the opposition to Mr. Delamater. It cannot be that Republicans all over this county are so forgetful as not to remember that Mr. Nash was elected by the campaign appeal that was made to young men, without regard to party. Many republicans voted against Mr. Morris because they thought he had had enough, and for other well known reasons which delicacy forbids mentioning."

AN AGGRESSIVE ADVANCE.

The address of Chairman Andrews sounds an advance along the entire line, and this to be pushed until the election closes in triumph for Delemater and the entire State ticket. The defense has been complete, the denials as complete as possible, and the time has come to assail. We heartily concur in the suggestion, which anyone can read between the lines of the State address, that defense shall cease and assault be the order of the day. Republicans everywhere should show suborned libellers in their true colors, and shun as well the motives of the Mugwumps who wear the uniform of Republicanism so that they may with greater safety assassinate the Republican candidates. Aggression and assault will uncover these elements and place them where they belong, and rid the campaign of some of its deceptions and hypocricies. More than this, true Republicans everywhere will rally to the standard and such a rally means unquestioned victory. The stake played for is well described by Chairman Andrews as of far-reaching importance from every National standpoint, and as vital to the Republicans of Pennsylvania since it touches and threatens their rights of representation. The watchword is timely, and presages victory.

THE EXILES

A RUSSIAN STORY.

"Goodness gracious! But hush, Marie, they are coming from the church—the civil marriage was performed at the mayor's office yesterday, was it not?"

"Yes, Berthe—but will you never stop talking!"

The two peasant girls relapsed into silence; at that moment, emerging from the church, the bridal procession advanced up the street.

Nadege and Yegor came first. Nadege, in a white satin dress and with a wreath of orange blossoms crownin, her flaxen hair, was the very incarnation of beauty; Yegor, clad in the usual attire of a bridegroom, had quite a Parisian look.

M. Lafleur followed, holding little Ladislas by the hand.

Then came a host of the dancing-master's relatives.

The procession was greeted with loud and joyous shouts from the men, while the women and girls waved their handkerchiefs and scattered flowers along its path.

At last, a small but very picturesque cottage was reached. It was M. Lafleur's property. Every door in it was open, and every window admitted the fragrant summer air which seemed anxious to kiss the cheek of the fair bride as she stood in her new home.

M. Lafleur had thoroughly refitted his cottage on his return to Chateau-Thierry. It glistened with glossy paint, the furniture was all new, and in the parlor, spread out upon several tables, was the dancing-master's famous collection of Siberian curiosities that was to gain him honorable mention from all the savans in France.

When Nadege and Yegor had entered the parlor, a number of invited guests gathered about them to wish them joy. When they stood aside, Ladislas came shyly up and took his adopted sister's hand. Nadege bent down and kissed him, and as she did so the remembrance of his devotion to her and of their mutual peril amid the polar ice flashed over her like a dream. Tears glistened in her eyes. Yegor instinctively comprehended what was taking place within her, and he, too, bent down and kissed the little Pole.

Then M. Lafleur came forward; he took the bride and groom each by the hand, at the same time gallantly impressing a kiss on Nadege's finger tips.

"Yegor and Nadege," said he, "this is, indeed, a happy day! I congratulate you both with all my soul. Of course, you understand that you are to live with me. The late Madame Lafleur must have a successor in Nadege, and you and she, Yegor, must be the comfort of my declining years—though, to be sure, I am not yet very old!"

"You should get married, too, Monsieur Lafleur!" said Nadege, slyly.

"Oh, no! The shade of the lamented Madame Lafleur forbid! Vive la liberte!"

The wedding dinner was announced, and the bridal party and guests went into the dining-room where a sumptuous repast was spread.

When all were seated, M. Lafleur, the incorrigible M. Lafleur, said to the guests:

"My friends, I regret exceedingly that upon this happy occasion I cannot offer you roasted elk's head, boiled seal fat, smoked reindeer tongues or any of the far-famed delicacies with which the Siberian festive board is so liberally stocked; but you must try to exist without them, and devote your attention to such commonplace viands as the local larder affords. I must also ask you to accept this champagne—upon my honor as a Frenchman I did not manufacture it myself—in lieu of fermented mare's milk, the koumis of the Yakoutes."

A hearty laugh went round the table, and Nadege gave a little shudder as she thought of the kamakay's bill of fare.

M. Lafleur's local larder was well supplied, at all events, with the best and most appetizing dishes that could be prepared by a celebrated Parisian cook, a perfect artist in his way, who had been prevailed upon to come to Chateau-Thierry, for this occasion only, by the tempting bait of a princely compensation.

His masterpieces were washed down by the gentlemen with copious draughts of Moet et Chandon, and even the ladies consented to sip a little of the foaming and sparkling beverage.

All was gayety, good humor and joy.

The health of the bride was drunk repeatedly.

When the final course had been discussed, the guests returned to the parlor and gathered about in knots, conversing and laughing.

Suddenly, M. Lafleur had an inspiration.

"We must have a dance!" cried he. "And I will conduct it as I used to conduct the dances of those delightful young ladies, Miles. Agrafena and Elena, at the governor's at Yakoutsk!"

Everybody applauded the idea, and M. Lafleur, producing his pocket violin, began to play and call out the figures of the Siberienne.

The dance was totally unknown to all the dancers, save Yegor and his bride, but, nevertheless, all took part in it, laughing heartily at each other's innumerable mistakes.

"This reminds me of Siberian delights!" cried M. Lafleur, playing away.

"If so," exclaimed one of the gentlemen, as he stumbled upon one of the ladies' trails, "they must bear a strong resemblance to confusion worse confounded!"

The dance over, Yegor and Nadege took a seat by a window. As the summer breeze fanned her glowing cheek, he leaned over her and whispered:

"Can you be happy, Nadege, in this foreign land?"

"Oh! yes, Yegor; I could be happy anywhere—with you!"

THE END.

THE LAST PARADE.

"It's all settled, Colonel; she's coming—she's actually on her way out."

There was a ring of triumphant joy in the voice of the speaker, a young man, who was waving a letter that was closely written on flimsy paper before the eyes of his advancing senior and looking quite ridiculously happy.

Upon the grave and rugged face of the stout old Colonel there was scarcely a smile, but in his reply could be heard a note of glad sympathy

"Well done! I am delighted! I thought I would just look in, as it is mail-day, and I knew you expected to hear. She didn't take long to make up her mind, I must say—first-rate, I call it!"

"You know what a brick Nelly is, Colonel. I left it entirely to her to decide; I only told her I was dying for her to come. Still I confess I hadn't much doubt as to which way it would be."

"Only told her you were dying for her! Poor little woman, I'm certain it has been a nasty wrench leaving those bairns of hers—worse than having five teeth out. Five children, aren't there?"

"Yes, five little ones. Poor Nelly, I wonder how she bore the parting! Hope she won't fret her heart out. It's wonderful how fond they are of each other—Nelly and her children."

"Poor things, I'm sorry for them; they will miss her sorely. Five of 'em—by Jove, what a tearing up by the roots!"

"I almost wish now I hadn't asked her to come," Jim Blake murmured, with a penitent, grieved look on his face, which presently mingled quaintly with one of triumph, as he turned the pages of his wife's letter.

It was amusing to watch him seeking for the faintest hint therein of dissatisfaction, not to say grief, on her part at the prospect of joining him in India, while all the time he was secretly conscious that Nelly was purposely presenting only one side of the medal to his view.

"She doesn't seem to mind so very much," said the husband, at length. "The children will be happy enough; my sister is to look after them. That is an old promise; and she is devoted to them."

The vague uneasiness in Jim's voice suddenly smote the Colonel and roused him from thinking of the pity of the whole affair—of a rifled nest where the young ones cried in vain for the mother-bird and resented the unfamiliar touch of other wings, however gentle. It was just like him, he declared to himself angrily; he could do no good, and was only killing the new-found joy of his friend.

"Now look here, Blake," he said cheerily, "if Mrs. Blake is actually on her way out, you have precious little time to lose. It will require all you know to make this miserable little hole presentable."

"That's true; but Rama and I have already held a council of war. I've had my eyes open, I can tell you. You see, I was pretty sure all along how it would be, and I've been looking about. Old Muncherjee has a fair lot of kit, and, once the bungalow is ready for it, it won't take long to put it in. There's the drawing-room kit—that's the rub. A round table, of course, for the middle of the room, a what-not for knick-knacks and books, a writing-table for Nelly herself, sofa, easy-chairs—h'm—h'm—h'm—that's about all, I think, for the drawing-room. I've made a sort of rough list, but the place won't look anything like what it should until she has had a field-day at it herself—has put the tables and chairs in skirmishing order, driven back the heavy furniture, and put to flight my most cherished articles. She will begin with an attack upon the position of the big round table—its size and weight won't daunt her—and the unwieldy sofa, which is the only one old Muncherjee has—see if she doesn't—and she will end with an apology for interfering with all my beautiful arrangements; while I simply do as I'm told and wonder at her genius. Or perhaps she won't like to hurt my feelings just at first, and will pretend that she admires it all extremely; and all the time she will be burning to have a go at it. Then the very first time I'm out of the way she'll get hold of Rama, and, when I come back, she'll meet me looking as innocent as possible."

By this time a broad smile spread over Jim's good-looking sun-bronzed face, while his eyes, shining with happy anticipation, stared into the glare beyond the veranda. He seemed to have forgotten the Colonel's presence, and to be describing his little love-lit picture unconsciously aloud.

The Colonel removed his pipe from his mouth with a smile full of meaning, then coughed.

Captain Blake's attention was forthwith recalled to the present, and the reaction ruffled him. He glanced fiercely at the Colonel, who was looking contemptuously at the torn envelope on the back of which a meagre list of articles was scribbled. The wave of his thick brown hand was comprehensive.

"This won't do at all," he said.

"What won't do! This is my office kit, if that is what you are referring to."

"Stop a bit! Where are your curtains and carpets, and pretty chintzes to hide the nakedness and dirt of Muncherjee's rubbish! And what about garden and flowers, and whitewashing inside and out, and painting window-frames, et-cetera—eh!"

"The et-cetera must go to the wall," said Jim, crossly.

"You mean the curtains, my dear fellow; and you're right there," remarked the Colonel, smiling.

"There will be curtains, certainly—Nelly was to bring them—at least, I hope she will think of it—and a carpet, of course—only one carpet, I've seen one at Muncherjee's which is the very thing for the centre of the drawing-room. For the rest, the present admirable matting must do. Nelly prefers matting; so do I. It is not costly, has the merit of cleanliness, and shows up snakes—three cardinal virtues."

"The matting must be the China. This palm stuff plays the deuce with ladies dresses and cuts your feet to pieces. Besides, it looks rough and bad."

"As we are not yet reduced to going barefoot, we shall get along all right," remarked Jim, who had recovered his good temper.

"How about your wife's pretty gowns? It will fray them in no time," persisted the Colonel.

"Let her cut off the tails, then," retorted the husband. "Joking apart, though, Colonel, I'm sure I shall be able to make quite a decent little place of it. I am getting two hundred rupees for my polo pony from Jones, of the police, who has been hankering after it for a long time. The fact is, I am much too heavy for the little animal, and I wouldn't have gone in for polo at all, only things here are so wretchedly slow in the evenings. I sha'n't want it now that Nelly's coming."

"Lucky dog! A wife in exchange for a polo pony!" remarked the Colonel, drily. Then he raised his bulky form with a groan from the depths of a long cane-chair, and spoke in an eager business-like tone.

"Look here, man—don't be in a hurry to part with that pony; he will carry your wife like a bird. Or, if you do sell him, put the bit of money away against a rainy day. The fact is"—here the Colonel coughed, colored, and looked awkward and uncomfortable—"the fact is," he repeated shyly, "ever since you told me you had written to your wife I knew very well she was certain to come, and I have been turning things over in my mind. My idea is this—why shouldn't you two come right into my bungalow just as it is? My time will be up in a few months, as you know, and in any case I must go; another hot season in this abominable country would about do for me. Now, if you will take my place, you will find everything ship-shape, you will have neither bother nor expense, and you will be doing me a kindness into the bargain. You shall have it all to yourselves. I've reserved the little bungalow in the compound for my own use; and it is much more snug for a bachelor than my present big rambling place."

"Really, Colonel, you are awfully kind! But no, no—it is impossible! You are much too good—"

"Confound it, man, you don't suppose I flatter myself that any miserable kindness I could do for you would be half what it should be!" The Colonel was growing purple and hoarse with excited feeling. "Do I ever forget Kandahar, do you think? It wasn't your fault that you didn't catch that beastly small-pox! What would your Nelly have said to me if you had—eh? I remember her sweet face, her eyes full of tears, her pretty lips trembling, that time we were off to the front. You were looking after the baggage—the row was deafening. She would come and see you off—and, by Jove, she behaved like a brick! She put her two hands on my arm, saying, 'You will look after him, Colonel, won't you?' And a nice way I had of doing it! Let you nurse me single-handed through malignant small-pox!"

"And jolly lucky you were to get me!" Jim said laughingly, with an affectionate look at his rugged old friend. "But I ran no risk; I have never caught anything in my life, except a wigging from you! As you know, fire and water, fevers, accidents, and bullets have all been near me, but all of them missed me. I'm not afraid."

"Don't make too sure, my boy! Any way, you stuck to me; and, cross-grained old chap though I am, I can't forget it. As for your wife, she and I were always chums—ever since her pinafore days, when her father and I were friends. You will, I assure you, be doing me the greatest of favors by accepting this offer of mine! Just think it over."

Jim Blake walked the length of the veranda, a thoughtful look on his handsome resolute face—he was loath to disappoint his dear old friend; but, when he turned, the Colonel saw at a glance that his mind was made up, and the expression on his own face changed.

"You don't mind my saying exactly what I think, Colonel, I know," Jim began, when he had stationed himself, with his hands in his pockets, exactly in front of the Colonel. His thoughts must have been loving ones, for Jim's honest gray eyes were filled with a tender light and his voice was very gentle. "It is this way. That plan of yours would be awfully jolly, and, whatever you may say, I can't thank you enough. But the truth is, I feel sure my little wife would rather come to a place of our own, no matter how small. I mean she will think such a lot of anything I do. She will be delighted with all my little dodges; and—and it will seem more like home to Nelly."

"I see," said the Colonel, dolefully; "I can do nothing! It's always the way whenever I try. It's something in my manner, I suppose—some nasty—"

"Oh, I say, don't!" cried Jim, in genuine distress. "You can do lots of things."

The old man was unfurling his white umbrella and preparing to dart forth into the sunshine, a look of childish wrath and disappointment on his red face; but Jim laid a detaining hand upon his arm.

"You can help us in heaps of ways. You mentioned flowers just now. Why, if you don't come to the rescue, I shall be in a difficulty over the garden! It has all to be made. Luckily, though, we have a big well in the compound and abundance of water! The thing must be set going at once!"

"I can stock the garden, if that's all," said the old man, in a grumbling tone.

"And chairs," continued Jim, serenely—"chairs are not to be had at Muncherjee's for love or money—at least not the kind—"

"You shall have piles of chairs of all shapes," said the Colonel, with returning amiability.

"Oh, and—well, we're not proud—cooking pots! You take your meals at mess, I know, and I dare say you have kit of a sort doing nothing. That would be something like a help now—pots are so confounded dear to buy."

The Colonel brightened up considerably, and, when he had been asked for a few more concessions, was himself again. Then, after assisting to plan the future garden and devoting some little time to ways and means, he marched off, in a measure consoled.

Jim watched him as he proceeded along the straight glaring road leading into the camp, till the stout figure dwindled to a mere dot beneath the huge umbrella.

The doctor had strolled in, and, with a frown, he stood beside his brother-officer watch the umbrella till it was out of sight.

"Poor old boy, I'm afraid he's seedy—he's so confoundedly touchy!" remarked Jim. "Rum old chap, but as good as gold! It's about time he cleared out, though I should not wonder if he hangs on for a brigade. He will hate handing over the reins. I believe, when it comes to his last parade, he'll cry like a baby."

"There's no use my speaking to him," the doctor remarked, with a shrug. "Five-and-thirty years in this abominable country, without going home, is about as much as a man can stand! He is as yellow as a guinea, and his heart is like a sponge. A spell of excessive heat or the least excitement would carry him off like a shot. By the way, I came to tell you that that ill-conditioned brute Shaik Ibrahim is off the sick-list at last."

"Oh, all right! I've been suspecting him of malingering—in fact, I suspect him of more than that—but the Colonel won't listen to a word against him. The scoundrel knows I've got my eye upon him; but he's deuced cunning!"

"He is a confounded rascal, and no mistake; but his illness was genuine enough this time. For days we had a job to make him taste food. He's all right again now; but there are two men I should be thankful to see safe out of the regiment—our poor old C. O. and Shaik Ibrahim."

* * * * * *

It was only a four-wheeled cab, laden with luggage, driving away, and five little hearts that were breaking, and five little sodden handkerchiefs that would not wave because they were so wet and heavy with tears, and, when the cab had turned the corner and they had looked their last upon the dear mother's pale tear-stained face, only five miserable little children who refused to be comforted.

When Jim's letter, with its piteous appeal, first came, the mother's heart said "No." The letter arrived on a Sunday morning, and it kept Nelly from church. All through the long hours of that Sunday the mother's heart said "No."

"Darling mother, you won't leave us?" pleaded the children; for to these most biased of little counsellors had Nelly confided her case. "There are five of us and only one of him."

"So that you have each other, my darlings, while he is all alone," she answered, feebly.

It was a hard fight that day; but at even Nelly arose, put off her sackcloth and ashes, and bravely went forth to church with her children. There were questioning and mournful looks among the little ones, for they guessed that their mother had made up their mind.

"She is going to leave us!" they whispered to each other; and they were right.

That night there was peace between the mother and children.

"You must let me go," she said, and added, with a wavering smile. "Try not to make it harder, my darlings! Let us all be brave."

"Funny, isn't it?" people remarked. "Little Mrs. Blake doesn't seem overjoyed at the prospect of joining her husband."

Across the wide seas, in lonely misery, went the mother, feeling as if every mile she traveled stole away some of her life with it. Little hands held the end of the thread—that thread of her life and happiness which was being reeled off faster and faster the farther she traveled from them.

Ships passed her in mid-ocean, and she longed to scream across the cold waste of waters and implore those in charge of the vessels to stop and take her back, till the strain became almost too much for heart and brain.

"Why did I desert them?" was the burden of her cry. "Oh, why was I in such a hurry?"

Only two short weeks ago she was with her darlings, their clinging arms about her neck, their soft pleading voices sounding in her ears, and now already she had put miles of sea between them and her. It was as if she had felt that there was not a moment to lose, and that she must be by her husband's side upon a certain given date at latest; yet he had never hinted at such a condition, nor hastened her movements in any way. And now it seemed as if the hurry swamped her whole mental being; and, as she approached her journey's end, a mad feverish longing to get to Jim took possession of her.

It was evening—the evening but one before the vessel arrived. The sun, like a fiery globe, hovered above the horizon, gilding the vast expanse of the Indian Ocean. Nelly, who was lying very quietly, her sad eyes fixed upon the golden mirror, suddenly started violently with a stifled scream, as though somebody had fired off a gun at her elbow. She sprang to her feet and stretched out both hands with a cry of "Jim!" Then quietly sat down and cried a little, and presently smiled at her own foolishness.

"It is the great heat," said the ship's doctor, "and the nerves are unstrung. A little bromide—a night's rest. Soon be in Bombay," &c.

At last! Before dawn every creature was on deck, eager to catch the first glimpse of one of the most beautiful natural harbors of the world.

The sheltering hills were just emerging from the blue night-mists and clothing themselves in radiant colors. Boats were putting off from the still distant bunder, and isolated sails here and there in the harbor swept along with orange gleams. Fussy excited passengers crowded the deck, hugging their small possessions, each one convinced in his own mind that he would be the first to be "fetched off."

"The pilot hasn't come on board yet," remarked the Captain impatiently, in answer to the stream of anxious questions; "and he's always the first; and along with him comes the health-officer. No one is allowed on board till we've proved a clean bill of health."

"Jim will arrive with the pilot and the health-officer," said Nelly to herself.

* * * * * *

"I think that will do," remarked Captain Blake, proudly, surveying, with his head on one side, a row of limp plantains which stood, or rather drooped, on either side of the garden path. They were being inundated with water in the hope of reconciling them to the change of scene; but the stiffness was all out of their prim green skirts, and they looked sorrowful and sad.

For days the harsh squeak and creak of the primitive windlass at the well had been incessant, making its own monotonous scale of discords from dawn till dusk, accompanied by the cheerful oaths and guttural noises indulged in by the goaders of the oxen. The garden was being flooded with water in order that flowers might grow in tropic haste to welcome Nelly.

The inside of the tiny bungalow was marvelously transformed. The Colonel had got his way in the matter of China matting and curtains, and sundry et-ceteras after his own heart.

On this day Jim had spent the whole of the time in going into and out of a certain apartment which was entirely of his own contrivance—half lady's boudoir and half dressing-room.

All was ready now, even to the gorgeous pin-cushion and cut-glass scent-bottles with tops of indian silver; and he had gone so far as to provide an exquisite silver box in which were powder and a puff! He arranged the pretty things afresh for the fiftieth time, and ended by snuffing the violet powder all over his mustache in his eagerness to test its perfume.

The bugle sounded. One more parade—only one—for he would be off before dawn on the morrow to meet his wife!

The charger pawed the ground before the door. Jim put on his gloves, sword, and helmet; the groom held the bridle, and in another moment Jim was off at a mad gallop. The Captain sahib was never too early for parade, and the dear old horse knew it.

How gallant and handsome the young officer looked, as he reined up for a moment to see what effect his masterpiece produced upon the beholder from the road! If only he and Nelly could manage to time their arrival for just that hour of the evening when the shadows were long and the setting sun lent such enchantment to the temple among the palms, to the patriarchal well—yes, even to the cool green plantains which still wore an injured look, but were pleasant and restful to the eye!

A shake of the reins and another mad gallop brought Captain Blake on to the parade ground just in time to meet the Colonel leisurely riding up.

Talking and laughing, together they approached the regiment; then the junior officer was about to turn aside to take up his position, and the Colonel opened his mouth to give the word of command. Before the words had left his lips, there was the glint of a rifle, a glare of hatred from wicked eyes, a sharp report, and a fiendish triumphant yell.

The victim, throwing up his arms, fell heavily to the ground with a dull thud. In a moment every English officer was off his horse, and a knot of blanched and horrified watchers waited while the doctor cut open the victim's uniform.

Close by a horrible scuffle was taking place. Amid yells and oaths, and after many a wound more or less severe, Shaik Ibrahim was finally overpowered. In his frenzied blood-shot eyes there was a gleam of fury as he was dragged away, for he had been baffled. His work had been hindered: he had been permitted to shoot "one dog only instead of two."

* * * * * *

There is a peculiar dismalness in the surroundings of a sick-bed from nightfall till dawn in India. There is the long night, the leaden-footed hours of which are marked by the slow mournful wail of the distant watchman—"All's well!"—the occasional buzz and crackle of a flying beetle that has dashed into the flame of the night-light, the dismal inquiring howl of a horde of jackals as they sniff about with their "Where—where—where—wh-e-e-e-r-e?"—the sudden chill of the hour before dawn, when rats run riot and wild-cocks crow. A foul dank air spreads among the trees, and from the earth a chill vapor rises. From out of it come things innumerable, with faint eerie rustles and tappings as they creep—scorpions and reptiles which feel the sudden cold and seek to insinuate their bodies into cosy nooks, beneath carpets and pillows, or within sponges and boots.

The Colonel's face was ashen gray as he sat by the bedside of the wounded officer, his lips were set, his eyes hollow with despair. About his heart there was a deadly pain. The doctor had said that Jim Blake's hours were numbered.

"Will he live to see and recognize his wife?" the Colonel asked more than once.

The evasive answers cut him to the heart, and the poor rugged old face grew grayer.

The Colonel's bungalow being close to the parade-ground, the wounded man had been conveyed thither; and so, after all, it was fated that Nelly should come there, and not to the little nest that loving hands had prepared for her.

After a little time there was a change.

"If only his wife would come!" sighed the doctor. "He frets for her. If only she could be here in time!"

At last she came—came as he had wished when the sun was setting, gilding, as she passed, the background of palms, and casting long mysterious shadows and gorgeous lights round about the old well, the cool green plantains, and the tiny square bungalow. And, as she jolted by, she knew not that all the little scene was planned for her, and, even had she known, she could not have looked at it for the tears that dimmed her eyes.

At his own gate the Colonel met her, but he could find no words of greeting for her who was to have been so royally welcomed. His had been the kindly forethought which arranged that the terrible news should be gently broken to her on landing at Bombay, and in such manner that despair should not travel with her through all the long journey up country. And now, when he met her at his gate, he could only lower his gray head over her small cold hands and whisper hoarsely that there was still hope—for there was life.

Then Nelly knew what need there had been for her to hasten her coming. Kneeling by the bed where her husband lay white and still, but breathing yet, she thanked Heaven for having guided and quickened her footsteps.

Till close upon dawn she watched beside the still form. She was past thinking, but her weary mind was filled with the comforting knowledge that Jim was still alive.

As the dawn broke she fancied she felt the cold wings of the recruiting angel. With wide startled eyes she gazed at her husband, and saw that there was a change. Then she cried aloud, with a great sob:

"Oh, Heaven, let him speak to me—only once!"

At that moment Jim opened his tired eyes and saw her.

Her hands grasped his tightly. Would he say good-by! They were alone together in the gray dawn, with the morning star looking in. Would it all end like this!

"My darling, you have come in time!" he said, in a labored whisper.

* * * * * *

When the doctor entered a few minutes later, Nelly was told that the Angel of Death had indeed been with her, but not to stay. He had passed on and claimed the Colonel, who died quite peacefully.

The old man was found dead in the chair where he sat watching through the long night outside Jim's door—"Within call," he said.

—The complete novel in the November number of Lippincott's Magazine is contributed by Mrs. Jennie Gwynne Bettany, the clever author of the "House of Rimmon." The story is entitled "A Legend in Love," and the scene is laid in England, principally in what is known as the "Black Country." The homes and characters of the rustic people dwelling therein are described with a wonderfully graphic pen, for Mrs. Bettany possesses a touch and genius something akin to that of George Elliott, which enables her to weave a thrilling romance out of the lives of humble people. The birth and development of an overmastering passion in the heart of a young country maiden, and the tragic force which it becomes, is pictured with the hands of a master. A great variety of characters, representing different phases of English life, are introduced and all are capitally portrayed. Without obtruding itself, the moral of the story is a strong and healthy one.

How often we hear middle-aged people say regarding that reliable old cough remedy, N. H. Downs' Elixir: "Why, my mother gave it to me when I was a child, and I use it in my family; it always cures." It is always guaranteed to cure or money refunded.

Judge Samuel Linn.

Hon. Samuel Linn, who died in Williamsport on Tuesday, was for a long time a resident of Bellefonte, and hence was well known in this community. For this reason we publish the following:

BRIEF SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

Samuel Linn was born in Centre county February 20, 1820, and was therefore in the seventy first year of his age. He was the fourth son of Rev. J. Linn, for over fifty years pastor of the Presbyterian church at Bellefonte. His mother died when he was two years old. In early life Mr. Linn followed civil engineering, and was with a corps of engineers, who were engaged in exploring a route for the North branch canal beyond Pittston, now the site of the Lehigh Valley Railroad. He continued in this position for about five years, and, although a mere stripling, earned an enviable reputation and one which would have done credit to many others more advanced in this vocation.

He commenced reading law in the office of Bond Valentine, Esq., of Bellefonte, in 1840, and also attended the law school of Judge Reed, at Carlisle. He completed the course of reading with the late Hon. J. F. Hale, and was admitted to the bar af Centre county in 1843. He soon made his mark at the bar and rapidly rose in the profession, being associated at times with Hon. J. T. Hale, W. P. Wilson, Esq., and others.

In 1859 he was elected President Judge of the district composed of the counties of Centre, Clearfield and Clinton. As a Judge his charges to the jury were clear and explicit, his decisions were marked by general acquiescence, and his sentences were just; but Judge Linn was not satisfied with himself in the position he so acceptably filled and resigned in 1868, after having been on the bench about nine years, and resumed practice in co-partnership with A. O. Furst, Esq., which continued until his removal to Williamsport in 1869. On taking up his residence here he entered into partnership with Hon. W. H. Armstrong, and the law firm of Armstrong & Linn was established. Mr Linn retired from the firm in 1877 and practiced alone for some time when he associated with him W. D. Crocker, Esq., which partnership continued down to the close of his life. In 1857 Judge Linn published his "Analytical Digest of Parallel Reference" in cases adjudged in the courts of Pennsylvania, a work involving an immense amount of labor and of great value to the preparation of causes.

The Senatorial "Kick."

Its a queer position our Democratic neighbors down in Clinton have taken on the Senatorial question. They are kicking like steers, not because of the character, qualifications, or Democracy of the nominee, but because Centre carried off the "plum."

Four years ago Clinton deliberately forced the nomination on Clearfield after that county had had the Senator ten out of the sixteen years these three counties had constituted a district—thus giving Clearfield the Senator five terms to Centre one and Clinton one. There was no kicking then; but now when Centre gets a second term in twenty-four years, the same people who gave to Clearfield so much more than that county was entitled to, makes a terrible hub-bub and threatens all manner of disaster to the party.

Of course, all this is water on our mill, and we hope the fight may go on, but looking at it through our spectacles we can only conclude that there is one of three things very evident: First, either some body got badly left in a trade they thought they had made four years ago; or second, there is a deep seated and uncalled for jealousy towards our own county among Lock Haven Democrats; or, third, Mr. Hipple and his friends are playing the "baby" act.

If it is the first of these, and a nomination was expected by Mr. H. in consequence a trade made four years ago, he got just what he deserved. If it is the second, and it is a question of which county, in place of which party, shall have the Senator, they will find that Centre will stand solidly by its own people. If it's the third, we will know exactly in what class to place the Democratic politicians of Lock Haven, or particularly those who hang on to Mr. Hipple's coat tail.

Under any circumstances we hope the "kick" will continue. Its fun for us, even if it is death to the enemy.

Changes in the Y. M. C. A. Gymnasium Rules.

At a recent meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. the following hours were set apart for the different classes of members of the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium:

Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays, from 3 o'clock p. m. to 5 p. m. for ladies.

Thursdays and Fridays from 5 to 6 p. m., and Saturdays from 10 to 3 p. m. for boys.

The other hours of the week for young men exclusively. The experiences in the gymnasium during the past months demands that such changes be made in the interest of the association.

The California Brothers

Harken to me, Brother—harken;
I have something I would say
Ere the veil my vision darkens,
And I go from earth away;
I am dying, brother, dying;
Soon you'll miss me from your berth:
And my form will soon be lying
'Neath the ocean's briny surf.

Lie up nearer brother, nearer—
For my limbs are growing cold,
And thy presence seemeth dearer,
When thy arms around me fold,
I am going, brother, going!
Yet my hope in God is strong:
I am willing, brother—knowing
That he doeth nothing wrong.

Tell my Father, when you greet him,
That in death I prayed for him,
Prayed that I might one day,
Meet him in a world that's free from sin
Tell my Mother God will help her,
Now that she is growing old—
That her child did yearn to kiss her
When his lips were growing cold.

Listen, brother—catch each whisper,
'Tis my wife I'd speak of now
Tell, Oh! tell her, how I missed her
When the fever burned my brow;
Tell her, brother—closely listen—
Don't forget a single word—
That in death my eyes did glisten
With the tears her memory stirred.

Tell her she must kiss my children
Like the kiss I last impressed;
Hold them as when last I held them,
Folded closely to my breast:
Give them early to their maker,
Putting all her trust in God;
And he never will forsake her,
For he says so in his word.

Oh, my children!—Heaven bless them;
They were all the world to me:
Would I could once more caress them
Ere I sink into the sea;
T'was for them I crossed the ocean
What my hopes were I'll not tell
For they've gained an orphan's portion;
Yet He doeth all things well.

Tell my sisters I remember
Every kindly spoken word,
And my heart has been kept tender,
With the thought their memory stirred;
Tell them I ne're reached the heaven
Where I sought the precious dust
But I've gained a port called Heaven,
Were the gold will never rust.

Tell them to secure an entrance—
For they'll find their brother there—
Faith in Jesus, and repentance,
Will secure for each a share,
Hark! I hear my Jesus speaking—
'Tis His voice I know so well.
When I'm gone, Oh! don't be weeping
Brother, here's my last farewell.

The Next Attraction.

On Tuesday evening, October 21, at Garman's opera house the attraction will be Little's "World, a play in six acts and ten tableaux, which are said to be marvels of mechanical ingenuity and scenic art. One of these is a representation of an ocean steamer, and the raft scene is said to be grand as well as exciting. The piece is one in which comedy is well blended with startling situations and thrilling dialogues, and the plot carries an intense interest until the final climax is reached. It combines mirth, music and pathos, and is said to be one of the grandest American plays ever produced.

The opening act will represent the harbor with the departing steamer. The second act shows the ship at sea, with a mutinous crew endangering the lives of all on board. In the third act the great raft scene is portrayed, with water all around the shipwrecked hero and heroine. The fourth and fifth scenes are equally interesting, the latter showing a lunatic asylum, with a transformation picture and a beautiful moonlight panorama. The piece will be produced in a better shape than ever and it is certain to interest the audience who will go to see it. In order to produce the wonderful mechanical effects which materially assist in making the play interesting and realistic, the company carry an immense amount of scenery and every attention is given to detail. In order that the drama shall be produced in the best possible shape an excellent company has been selected for its portrayal and the management guarantee that every scene will be as promised, and that those who go to see it will enjoy it immensely.

If you have not already selected your seat you had better do so at once as they are going fast and the choice seats will soon all be gone.

Newly Elected Y. M. C. A. Officers.

The annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. was held on Friday evening in the Young Men's Christian Association hall, on Allegheny street, for the election of officers for the ensuing year which resulted as follows:

President—Newton S. Bailey.
Vice President—Charles Rhone.
Treasurer—John Walker.
Secretary—Frank P. Bassett.
Board of Directors—D. M. Lieb, A. Lukenbach, E. S. Garman, J. C. Weaver, J. W. Gephart, W. S. Zeller, A. Lucas and Dr. J. W. Rhone.

Mr. Ed. Dumel was continued as General Secretary.

Mrs. Youngbride—How is it that you charge a cent a quart more than the other milkmen?

Waterpotts—Madame, you must remember that all my milk is hand milked. That, of course, makes the price a little higher.

—The two companies that will appear in the opera house next week are both exceptionally good. "Little's World" company is now in its twelfth season and has not a superior on the road. While "The Hearts of New York" company is A. No. 1. Secure your seats now as there will be a rush next week.

CINCINNATI'S SHAME.

Gov. Campbell's Second Message to the General Assembly.

THE EXECUTIVE IGNORED.

When the Message Was Sent to the House the Speaker Adjourned the Body So as Not to Receive It. Presented to the Senate.

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 22.—Governor Campbell is highly indignant and very much angered. After a week's filibustering in the special session of the legislature, nothing having been accomplished beyond the floating of some ugly rumors of corruption, he sent to the house Monday a second message. The speaker ignored the message and adjourned the body, and the message was thus for the time rejected.

Tuesday morning the message, which is as follows, was presented to the senate:

The Message.

To the General Assembly—You were summoned here to perform a plain and imperative duty. After a special session of several days, having been unable to agree upon the form of relief for the city of Cincinnati, some further suggestions are in order. * * *

It is recommended that in lieu of the present board of public improvements a non-partisan board be created, to be appointed by the mayor, who, as the executive head of the city government, ought to be responsible for its boards, and having himself been elected by the people of that city such appointment would be in conformity to the doctrine of "home rule."

Since you assembled it has been clearly demonstrated that, although no pains or expense have been spared to send a lobby here to mislead and intimidate you, nobody in the city of Cincinnati could be found for that purpose other than those having a direct personal interest in said board. This sufficiently proves how low the board itself has fallen in public estimation. * * *

A Handful of Schemers.

Let the handful of schemers who are scuffling in the dirt before you, hoping for some petty personal gain, be overlooked. Remember the great body of the people of Ohio who stand amazed at the scenes enacted here last week; who have read with disgust that notorious lobbyists sat in the hall of legislation, openly directing the votes and speeches of members, and who are fast learning to despise those who obstruct honest government and home rule.

The plain duty before you is to permit no deviation from the path marked out. Let no specious amendments or changes be permitted. Do not swerve a hair's breadth from your purpose to wipe out the board, and eventually submit the whole question to the people. From this time on any and all propositions other than this are meant for partisan advantage only. There is no middle ground. To delay longer is a confession of incapacity. To refuse the passage of the bill is a confession of infidelity.

JAMES E. CAMPBELL,
Governor of Ohio.

A Mysterious Disappearance.

MITCHELL, Ind., Oct. 22.—Professor J. W. Stotts, of this place, is mysteriously missing. He was recently professor of natural science in the Southern Indiana Normal College of Mitchell, but resigned a few weeks ago to accept a general agency for the Educational Aid association of Chicago. He left here the 6th of this month for Salem on company business, intending either to return here that day or to go to Lawrenceburg and from there return. But no definite information has been received from him since, either by his family or the company. His wife and three children are almost crazed with grief and anxiety. He had several hundred dollars in his pocket and his friends fear foul play.

They Shouted "Hang Him!"

CUMBERLAND, Ont., Oct. 22.—The inquest into the death of the two McGonigle little girls, who were found horribly murdered on Oct. 7, was concluded at an early hour Tuesday morning, the jury bringing in a verdict that from the evidence they strongly suspected Narcisse Larocque as being guilty of the crime. The prisoner was committed for trial. Some folks in the court room shouted "Hang him! Hang him!" and an exciting scene ensued, the constables with difficulty getting the prisoner safely into the lock up. There is great excitement here, and if Larocque is not speedily removed it is feared an attempt will be made to lynch him.

Thieving Indians.

DENVER, Colo., Oct. 22.—Governor Cooper received information that a large number of White River Utes had been off their reservation for some time and had crossed over into Colorado from Utah and were killing sheep and cattle belonging to ranchmen in Routt county. The governor at once telegraphed Secretary Noble, asking him to take steps to have the Indians driven back. These are the same Indians and they are committing the same depredations that caused the Ute war three years ago.

Poor Directors in Session.

LANCASTER, Pa., Oct. 22.—The directors of the poor of Pennsylvania began their sixteenth annual meeting here Tuesday. A large number of delegates from the various counties of the state are present. James L. Graham, of Allegheny, presided, and Judge Livingston made an address of welcome, to which F. C. Colbourne, of Somerset, responded. Routine business occupied the session.

The Wreck of the Troop.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 22.—A private cablegram from China states that Capt. Fownts, his child and ten of his crew were drowned when his ship, the Lizzie C. Troop, went ashore on the Loo Choo Islands, while bound from Philadelphia, via Shanghai, for Puget Sound. The captain's wife, the mate and the remainder of the crew were saved and are at the Loo Choo Islands.

Both Engaged to Germans.

BERLIN, Oct. 22.—The eldest daughter of the American minister, William Walter Phelps, is betrothed to Lieut. Reiter, one of the most popular young officers of the army. The minister's younger daughter's engagement to Baron Witzteben is also announced.

A Brazen Young Highwayman.

CHICAGO, Oct. 22.—Mrs. Mary Clemens, of 430 Adams street, was robbed of $3,000 while coming down town on a Madison street car. She had it in a leather sachel, and a young man who sat next to her grabbed it and sprang from the car.

HIS THROAT WAS CUT.

And Then He Was Thrown Headlong Out of Doors.

JERSEY CITY, Oct. 22.—Charles Schott, 20 years old, of Hudson and First streets, Hoboken, while in Meyster's saloon, at Washington and First streets, at 6 o'clock Tuesday morning, had his throat cut by one of a party of five young fellows, who he says were strangers to him.

The wound extended five inches in length from the left to the right of the throat. City Physician Helfer said that the wound was a bad one.

Schott and his companion Barney Meyers were taken to the station house by Policeman Porter. Meyers stated that he was tending bar at Odd Fellows' hall, where a ball was held. In the morning after the place was closed he and Schott went into Meyster's saloon to get a cigar.

Five young fellows whom he had seen at the ball were drinking at the bar, and they commenced smashing his hat down over his eyes. Then there was a fight, during which he was pitched headlong out of doors. When he got back Schott's throat had been cut, and he started out with him to go to a drug store to have the wound dressed, when the police took them to the station house.

Both of them denied knowing who their assailants were, but Sergt. Marnell was of the opinion that they were not telling all of the facts in the case. It incidentally transpired that a party of young women who had been at the ball were sitting in the back room of the barroom.

THE CORNER STONE LAID.

Peekskill's New Music Hall Celebrates with Masonic Ceremonies.

PEEKSKILL, N. Y., Oct. 22.—The corner stone of the new music hall, at the corner of South and Depew streets, was laid Tuesday afternoon with imposing ceremonies. The Hon. Chauncey M. Depew delivered the oration. The day was a big one in Peekskill's history. The programme was an elaborate one, and the fair weather allowed its successful carrying out.

The grand lodge of Masons of the state of New York was present, and Grand Master John W. Vrooman performed the ceremony of placing the corner stone in position with the usual Masonic rites.

Prior to the actual laying of the corner stone there was a short parade of the Peekskill Fire department, the Peekskill Military academy cadets, the Sons of Veterans, the members of the G. A. R. and the civic organizations of the village.

Ugly Cattle at Large.

BUFFALO, Oct. 22.—A dispatch to The Courier from Silver Creek says a party of men employed by the Lake Shore road have been out scouring the country for the western cattle that escaped from the wrecked train on Sunday, and yesterday afternoon drove them to the depot to load them. A few of them were very ugly, defying the best efforts of their captors to keep them under control, breaking away and attacking several people on the streets. Mrs. Herman Ichfield was knocked down by one, as was also Mr. Radigan, who was thrown over a fifteen or twenty foot embankment. Finally one of the village trustees, Charles F. Shumaker, went gunning for them with a Remington rifle and killed two. Much damage was done to lawns and vineyards by the frightened animals.

Straightening Out the Muddle.

ALBANY, Oct. 22.—The seceretary of state rejected the protest of W. H. H. Ely against the filing of the certificate of nomination of J. Thomas Stearns, the Republican nominee for congress in the Fourteenth district, on the ground that it was not received within three days of the time when the Stearns certificate was filed. The secretary of state also rejected the remodeled certificate of nomination of Dennis Nerney, independent candidate for congress in the Fourteenth district, on the ground of its failure to conform to the statute. The mandamus procured by Frederick Bennetts, the socialist candidate from the Fourteenth district, was served today upon the secretary of state, who will show cause on Thursday why the certificate should not be filed.

Pugilistic Pointers.

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 22.—Tommy Warren easily picked up $900 here last night by defeating Earnest Bescher before the Columbia Athletic club. The fight lasted a round and a half, when Warren landed his left over the heart, and his right on the jaw, and Bescher was out. Warren wants to fight Ike Weir or Cal McCarthy.

Jack Dempsey has signed articles of agreement to fight Bob Fitzsimmons for a purse and the middleweight championship of the world before the Olympic club, in this city, about the middle of December. The articles of agreement are coming by mail, a telegram to this effect having been received from Dempsey

Bad for Princeton's Team.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 22.—The greatest misfortune that could befall Princeton happened yesterday, when Poe, the quarterback and captain who led Princeton to victory on the football field last fall, fell in practice with his knee so badly wrenched that it is scarcely probable he will be able to play again this season. Dr. McDonald dressed the injured member. This is the worst thing that could happen to Princeton's team, for it is already weaker this year than for many years past, owing to the loss of many old players. Adams, '92, has also sprained his ankle, so that he can no longer practice.

Mayor Gleason Fined and Jailed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 22.—Mayor Patrick Jerome Gleason, of Long Island City, who was convicted of assault in the third degree for pounding and kicking Reporter George R. Crowley in Miller's hotel a few weeks ago, was Tuesday morning sentenced by Judge Cullen to five days' imprisonment in the Long Island county jail and to pay a fine of $250.

We could go on and quote for whole pages like reductions but have not the space. We intend to convert our entire clothing stock inside of the next 60 days, and we propose to save you at least 20 to 50 per cent. on your purchases.

This is not merely a blow to make money, but it is an actual bonafide reduction of all Men's wearing apparel to wholesale cut prices for the purpose of making some radical changes in our stock and to commence business on January 1st or thereabouts with an entire different line of goods.

Remember that our entire stock is nearly all goods purchased this season. In our dry goods and dress goods lines we have the most complete stock in the county.

A WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

Lightning Rips a House to Pieces Without Harming the Inmates.

ALGONA, Ia., Oct. 22.—News of a remarkable escape comes from the little town of Rolfe, in Pocahontas county. A Norwegian named Englewood Gabriellsen, who lives at that place, had retired for the night with his family, and all were sleeping soundly, when the house was twice struck by lightning and almost completely demolished.

The first bolt struck the roof near the ridge on the south end. It then parted, and one streak, after passing diagonally across the roof and tearing up about a thousand shingles, passed to the ground by the screen door. The other bolt was more destructive. It tore the roof to pieces on the west side, shattered the rafters and studding, tore up the flooring in the second story and passed on through to the ground.

Mr. Gabriellsen and his wife were sleeping in a bed at the southwest corner of their bedroom; two of their children lay on a bed on the floor, with their heads toward a partition which divided the bedroom from the stairway. A young man named Jacob Hansen slept in the room adjoining, with his head toward the partition.

The current passed under the children, completely demolishing the floor, tore the beds to atoms on which Mr. Gabriellsen and his wife were sleeping and ripped out the siding and the partition of the room, scattering the lath and plastering in every direction, but not a single member of the family was hurt in any manner.

TORN INTO SHREDS.

Sickening Results of a Frightful Explosion—Five Men Killed.

MILAN, Tenn., Oct. 22.—A telegram from McNary county gives particulars of a horrible accident there yesterday, in which five men were killed. The boiler of an engine exploded and John White's head was blown from his shoulders and hurled fifty yards away. The body of the owner of the mill, H. E. Trimbull, was torn into shreds.

Stabbed on Shipboard.

BOSTON, Oct. 22.—The steamship City of Savannah, which sailed yesterday afternoon for Savannah, returned to deliver into custody Thomas Murphy, of New York, charged with stabbing Jeremiah Merriman, of East Cambridge. Both men were firemen on the steamship and quarreled, Merriman receiving a terrible wound in the abdomen. The authorities took charge of the two men and held as witnesses four others of the crew.

The Synod Adjourned.

READING, Pa., Oct. 22.—The eastern synod of the Reformed church in the United States adjourned here Tuesday. It was decided to hold the next annual meeting in Harrisburg on the third Wednesday of October, 1891. The special committee on the theological seminary at Lancaster presented a report urging the necessity of the erection of a suitable building for the institution.

Miners Very Uneasy.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Oct. 22.—In mass meeting the miners at Rock Springs, the most important camp in the state, decided to demand of the Union Pacific Coal department a reduction of a miner's ton from 2,250 pounds to 2,000 pounds. The men, owing to a shortage of cars and motive power, are working only about two days a week and are very uneasy.

Scrofula

Is the most ancient and most general of all diseases. Scarcely a family is entirely free from it, while thousands everywhere are its suffering slaves. Hood's Sarsaparilla has had remarkable success in curing every form of scrofula. The most severe and painful running sores, swellings in the neck or goitre, humor in the eyes, causing partial or total blindness, yield to the powerful effects of this medicine. It thoroughly removes every trace of impurity from the blood and builds up the weakened system.

"My little daughter's life was saved, as we believe, by Hood's Sarsaparilla. Before she was six months old she had 7 running scrofula sores. One physician advised the amputation of one of her fingers, to which we refused assent. When we began giving her Hood's Sarsaparilla, a marked improvement was noticed and by a continued use of it her recovery was complete. And she is now, being seven years old, strong and healthy." B. C. JONES, Alna, Lincoln County, Me.

BACKED BY GLADSTONE.

Mr. Roby Making the Canvass for Eccles on Irish Home Rule.

BURIED ALIVE CONVENTS.

The Naples Authorities Have Instituted Proceedings Against the Superior—The Pope Will Enter a Protest—The Irish Conspiracy Cases.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—The excitement increases in Eccles, as Wednesday, the day of election, approaches. While the Liberals have good reason to hope for success they are not over sanguine, as it would be a great victory to seize from a member of the influential Egerton family this constituency, heretofore regarded as securely Conservative.

Mr. Egerton, the Tory-Unionist candidate, has declined to make any promises or pledges on either the temperance or the labor issues, but he is personally popular, his family being largely interested in the mines at Walkden, and always looked to with esteem and affection as employers of the better class, having granted to their people many privileges not enjoyed by miners elsewhere.

Nevertheless, the miners have voted to support the Liberal nominee, Mr. Roby, who has the hearty indorsement of Mr. Gladstone, and has fought the battle largely on the issue of Irish home rule or English misrule. Both parties are holding excited meetings. Primrose league ladies are darting around in carriages to visit the electors, and no effort is being spared to win the victory.

The Irish Conspiracy Cases.

TIPPERARY, Oct. 22.—When the court which is hearing the conspiracy cases against Messrs. Dillon and O'Brien and others convened Tuesday morning, Mr. V. B. Dillon, of counsel for the defense, expressed a wish that the case was being conducted before a superior court, for there he could bring a charge of contempt against Mr. Balfour. Mr. Dillon then on behalf of his absent client, Mr. William O'Brien, asked that a summons be issued to compel the attendance in court of Mr. Balfour, there to state on oath what had been said by him in his Newcastle speech.

Mr. Dillon eloquently urged that the chief secretary for Ireland should not be protected by the court in his unscrupulous assaults upon political enemies. During the presentation of his argument in support of the request for the issuance of a summons for Mr. Balfour, Mr. Dillon's remarks were listened to with not altogether suppressed excitement.

The bench refused to grant the request of counsel for the defense, saying that it could not be the medium for accomplishing anything illegal or improper.

Hon. David Sheehy, member of parliament for the northern division of Galway and one of the defendants in the conspiracy trials now in progress here, was sentenced by the sitting magistrate to one week's imprisonment for contempt of court.

Convents of the Buried Alive.

NAPLES, Oct. 22.—The judicial authorities here have instituted proceedings against the superior of the monastery popularly known as the "Convent of the Buried Alive," where the dreadful discoveries of the existence of starving and demented nuns within its walls were recently made. The proceedings are under article 128 of the penal code.

Another domiciliary visit has been made by the police to a second conventual refuge of a similar character at Tincuraboli, where no opposition was made to their entrance. From information obtained at this establishment it was found that institutions for the "Sepolto Vive," or "Buried Alive," under the rule of Saint Orsola, are not uncommon.

In Vatican circles it is asserted that at the next consistory the pope will enter a protest against the violation of the monasteries here. In the mean time the priests of this city are sending in their adhesions to the remonstrance made by Cardinal San Felice, archbishop of Naples, against the recent visitations.

A Bloodless Duel.

PARIS, Oct., 22.—A duel between MM. Reinach and Deroulede, members of the chamber of deputies, has occurred and has been without any serious result. M. Reinach alone fired, M. Deroulede declining to do so. The affair grew out of M. Deroulede having, in the course of a heated discussion in the chambers yesterday, declared M. Reinach to be "that lackey of all administrations."

Will Tolerate No Intrigues.

BELGRADE, Oct. 22.—It has been privately intimated to the government by the czar that he is not desirous of a change in the ruling dynasty of Servia. This is interpreted as an intimation to the followers of Prince Nicholas of Montenegro and Prince Karageorgvitch that intrigues in behalf of either will not be tolerated by the Russian government.

Explorer Stanley's Appeal.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—Mr. Henry M. Stanley writes to The Times appealing for public subscriptions to make up the remaining $13,500 of the $25,000 required to build the mission steamer for Lake Nyanza. He contrasts English apathy with German activity in the same direction.

American Cattle Quarantine.

BRUSSELS, Oct. 22.—As a result of heavy importations of cattle from America a royal decree has been issued directing that the duration of quarantine be governed by circumstances. Heretofore the quarantine period has been ten days.

Parliament Prorogued.

LONDON, Oct. 22.—At a council held today at Balmoral the queen formally declared parliament prorogued until the 20th of November.

Many Indians Sign.

DARLINGTON, I. T., Oct. 22.—The signatures of 417 of the heads of families of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe tribes of Indians have been secured by the Indian commission to a contract providing for the purchase by the government of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe reservation of 3,000,000 acres in this territory. It was necessary to obtain only 360 signatures.

The New Cruiser Concord at Last Ready for Her Trial Trip.

HER ENORMOUS PENALTIES.

Nearly a Year and a Half Behind Contract Time, and a Fine of $200 a Day Running Against Her—The Cramps Want Designs Changed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—N. F. Palmer & Co., of Chester, Pa., have notified the navy department that the Concord is now ready for a trial trip, and a board will be designated by Secretary Tracy to accompany her on her trial trip within a few days. The Concord is nearly a year and a half behind the time contracted for her completion, and penalties of $200 a day are now running against her. The Bennington, a companion ship, is two months behind the Concord in being completed, with similar penalties also running against her.

Palmer & Co. are the successors of John Roach & Co., and have been so crowded with private work that they have delayed the government work, despite the large penalties to which they were subjected. It is discretionary with Secretary Tracy to remit the penalties or part of them as he may see fit.

Want the Designs Changed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—Cramp & Sons have asked the navy department to change the design of the stem and stern castings for the new armored cruiser No. 2, which was awarded them a few weeks ago, in order to permit them to get to work at once on the vessel. It is asserted that one or two firms have the monopoly of castings contained in the designs, and they show no disposition to even bid upon them, and work cannot be begun until the castings are obtained. The change desired is to have the specifications for the stem and stern altered so they can be forged instead of cast. The department has not indicated whether or not it will comply.

The Duty on Bicycles.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 22.—What duty will be charged under the new tariff laws upon foreign bicycles is a question that the treasury department has not yet considered, but will take up upon the first importation, which is expected to arrive in a few days. Under the old tariff bicycles came in under the classification of carriages, but in the new tariff law bicycles are not classified under any head. Assistant Secretary Spaulding, speaking generally on the subject of unclassified complex articles, said that duty would most likely be imposed upon them on the component parts of chief value.

Amazed at Our Resources.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Oct. 22.—The members of the British and German Iron and Steel institutes, who have been here two days, have left for Middlesborough, Ky. They express themselves as simply amazed at the vastness of the mineral resources of the south and the favorable outlook for their development. Sir James Kitson, president of the English society, said, "It is possible to make iron in this section as cheaply as in any part of the world." Percy Gilchrist, one of the founders of the basic steel process, said, "The ores here are peculiarly adapted for steel making." William Whitwell said, "Basic steel made from Tennessee iron compares favorably with that made in England." T. M. Percy, proprietor of a great open hearth steel works in Lancashire, says, "In the south, where phosphoric ores are so plentiful and fuel cheap, with the basic process, this section will compete with any part of America in making steel."

The Trades Union Convention.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Oct. 22.—At this morning's session of the trades union convention the committee on constitution reported a code to the federation which will be discussed. The third Monday in August was selected as the time for holding the annual convention of the state federation. A number of resolutions were reported favorably, but were not acted upon.

Gen. Williamson Very Ill.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 22.—Gen. James Alexander Williamson, of Washington, is lying very ill at the Midland hotel here. He is accompanied by his daughter Pauline. A rupture is the cause of his illness. Gen. Williamson was on his way from Albuquerque, N. M., to Washington when taken ill.

His Resignation Accepted.

The Only One.

Again it affords us much pleasure to be able to record the fact that the Pittsburg Exposition opened its doors promptly as advertised. The many things to be seen are worthy of much of our space, but we will dwell only on one exhibit, the only one of its kind at the great show. Well may we say it is worthy of comment. We refer with pride to the display of Mr Max Klein, the wholesale liquor merchant. There you will find a complete distillery in full operation. His Silver Age Rye stands on a pyramid high enough to overlook all other displays; the bbs, and cases show at once the extent of his trades, conveying the impression that he ships to all parts of the country. His Pennsylvania Rye Whiskies, his imported and domestic wines, brandies and cordials are prominent features. No other liquor house in the country would dare to compete with him in making a display, and no other house in his line can or will sell goods as pure and at such reasonable prices. You can leave orders at his stand or apply to him direct for his complete catalogue and price list. Such a house should receive the custom of all who wish fair treatment and to Max Klein 82, Federal St., Allegheny, Pa., we can recommend you.

Shaken Out of Gear.

By malarial disease, the human machinery cannot half perform its office. Digestion, secretion evacuation are disordered, the blood becomes watery, the nerves feeble, the countenance ghastly, sleep disturbed and appetite capricious. Terrible is this disease, fell its consequences. There is, however, a known antidote to the miasmatic poison, and a certain safeguard against it. In malarious regions of our South and West, in South American Guatemala and on the Isthmus of Panama as well as in transmarine countries where the scourge exists, this inimitable preventive and remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, has, during the last thirty-five years, been constantly widening the area of its usefulness, and demonstrating its sovereign value. Liver complaint, dyspepsia, constipation, kidney trouble, rheumatism and debility are all remedied by it. tf

WHAT IS SAPOLIO?

It is a solid handsome cake of scouring soap which has no equal for all cleaning purposes except in the laundry. To use it is to value it.

What will SAPOLIO do? Why it will clean paint, make oil-cloths bright, and give the floors, tables and shelves a new appearance. It will take the grease off the dishes and off the pots and pans. You can scour the knives and forks with it, and make the tin things shine brightly. The wash-basin, the bath-tub, even the greasy kitchen sink will be as clean as a new pin if you use SAPOLIO. One cake will prove all we say. Be a clever housekeeper and try it.

Wild Domestic Animals.

Almost all of the domestic animals you have in this country," said an Hawaiian Islander the other day, "we have running wild in countless numbers over our plateaus and hillsides. Wild dogs and cats are innumerable. The cats of every variety, from Maltese to tortoiseshell, are exceedingly fierce, while the dogs are mongrel, ferocious, and hunt other animals in packs for a living. Their original progenitors were tame specimens brought over in ships. So it is with the wild cattle that roam our mountains and forests. A good many years ago an enterprising man shipped to the Islands from San Francisco a bull and two cows, two or three calves six sheep and three or four goats. Some of their decendants escaped into the comparatively uninhabited interior of Hawiian, Oahu, and others of the group, and now we have myriads of wild bulls and cows, sheep and goats traveling about on their own hook and affording game for the sportsman's rifle."

"Do you have any wild pigs?" the Hawaiian was asked.

"Thousands and thousands, of them, and it is great fun hunting them, because the boars are exceedingly dangerous. Their lower tusks are perhaps eight or nine inches long and curved, and the upper tusks, curling about the lower one in a peculiar way, keep the lower tusks by mere friction sharpened to such an edge for about three inches from the point that they cut like razors literally, and would rip your flesh easily. They will not attack one if let alone, but when wounded they are demons. I remember very well a little experience I had about two years ago, while hunting wild cattle on the great interior plateau of Hawaii. We had killed seven cows and bulls, the party of us, had cut them in quarters and hung them up on trees, so that they might be sent for subsequently, and were just sitting down to some newly-cut slices of porterhouse steak when we heard a rustling in the bush and one of my companions sang out:

'Jim, there's a pig! Give him a shot quick, as he passes!'

'I picked up my gun and, seeing the beast in time as he tore by, I let fly at him and knocked him over. Supposing from its size that it was a sow, I dropped my rifle and sprang forward to secure the game. When I reached it the young boar—for such it was—had regained its feet and made for me, with tusks displayed. I had just time to make a frantic leap in the air as it passed beneath my feet, upon which it turned and made another rush, obliging me to jump again for safety. This it kept up for some time, making dash after dash, while I leaped and leaped, the other fellows simply lying back and almost splitting their sides with laughter instead of helping me. Finally I picked up a big stone, and as the boar rushed at me viciously for the 16th time, I let him have it in the head, That stunned him, and I had no trouble in finishing him off.

How did the pigs get to the islands?

That nobody knows. They were there when Capt. Cook discovered the Hawaiian group. But the supposition is that they came across, like the human population, from South Eastern Asia. You see, the islands are merely humps projecting out of the water and belonging to a great volcanic chain extending, mostly under water, from Asia. At one time there must have been other islands, or humps, out of water along the line between the present group and the Asiatic Archipelagoes, and from one to another animals, human and otherwise, made their way. Since then, however, these intermediate islands have been undermined by volcanic fires and have disappeared. It was in this way that only a few years ago, incidentally to the great Krakatoa eruption, a large part of Java vanished from view. I was going to say that the wild bulls of the Hawaiian Islands are most dangerous creatures to chase. If one of them be wounded you must kill him, for from that time forth he is looking for gore, and will, if left alive, attack every human being within reach.

TO CONSUMPTIVES.

The undersigned having been restored to health by simple means, after suffering for several years with a severe lung affection, and that dread disease "Comsumption," is anxious to make known to his fellow sufferers the means of cure. To those who desire it, he will cheerfully send (free of charge) a copy of the prescription used, which will find a sure cure for Consumption, Asthma, Catarrh, Bronchitis and all throat and lung Maladies. He hopes all sufferers will try his Remedy, as it is invaluable. Those desiring the prescription, which will cost them nothing and may prove a blessing, will please address REV. EDWARD A. WILTON, Williamsburg, Kings County, New York.

EUROPEAN retaliation on account of the McKinley tariff law seems to be causing some of the democratic editors of the country great trouble. Just why, we cannot see. How can they hurt us? we could get along if there was never another dollar's worth of European goods landed in this country, in fact many of our profoundest thinkers say we should be greatly benefited, but how could Europe get along without our wheat? Europe is compelled to buy our grain and other food products, while we can easily do without every thing we buy from Europe. Nothing alarming in that situation is there?

There are Fairs Elsewhere Too.

"Fine day."

This was the remark addressed by the man who was waiting for a street-car to the lank individual leaning against a lamp-post.

"Um—so so" replied the lank party, after taking a leisurely survey of the sky.

"If the wind keeps blowing in this direction for 24 hours longer there will be rain," ventured the first speaker.

"Um—I'm not so sure about that," said the other cautiously."

"The wind, at least, is dead south now."

"Um—perhaps."

"It certainly isn't north."

The lean individual pursed up his lips as if about to whistle, looked at the sky again, shook his head slowly and said:

"I'm not so blamed certain it isn't."

"At any rate, sir, it ain't raining now, is it? Hey?"

Another careful examination of the firmament and the cauticus remark:

"It may be raining and it may not. You can't always tell about these things."

"Great Jehosephat! Can't you see there isn't a cloud in the sky?"

'Um—likely enough. Likely enough. It may appear that way to some folks. But it's best not to be too sure.'

'May appear that way? Why, good gracious, man! Haven't you got any eyes?'

'Maybe I have and maybe I haven't,' retorted the attenuated individual, passing his hand over his face as if to find out. 'All that I know is that there's nothing certain in this world. You think there's a fair ground out at the end of this street, perhaps.'

'I certainly do.'

'Just so. I was certain of it yesterday myself. I was certain that there was a man out there with two or three walnut shells he was moving about on the head of a barrel. I was certain I could tell which shell the little black ball was under. I was just as certain of it as you are that it isn't raining. It cost me every darned cent I had to find out that I didn't know anything about it. I am not going to be sure of anything again as long as I live.'

He took a plug of tobacco from his pocket, looked at it as if he were not sure whether it was tobacco or not, put it back in his pocket, sighed a long, heavy, dismal sigh, and looked straight through the other man into the far off depth of space.

REPRESENTATIVE LODGE says of his Federal Election bill; "The bill is intended to reach impurities at the ballot box both in the North and in the South. The South wails the loudest because it fears to lose not only its own districts but its control of the democratic party in the nation and of the National Government if the democrats are in power XXX. In one word, it is a bill for honest elections, and no honest voter need fear it; but it is framed to bring the wrong doer to light and inflict upon him severe penalties."

THE republican party stands for one thing in every State in the Union. The democratic party stands for anything that promises to gain a few votes anywhere; it sends documents and speeches into one state that it does not dare to send into another.

OF course the McKinley tariff law is a blow at British interests. It was intended to be. The money we have been paying English manufacturers will hereafter be kept at home to pay American labor.

Crissman Wins,

THE "DAILY NEWS" PUMPKIN CONTEST CLOSED—4,620 VOTES CAST.

Following is the standing of the ballot in the DAILY NEWS pumpkin contest at the close of same at 9 o'clock this morning,

| | |
|---|---|
| Crissman | 847 |
| Gault | 711 |
| Jamison | 671 |
| Mitchell | 408 |
| Howley | 401 |
| Hillibish | 380 |
| Bauer | 341 |
| Potter | 318 |
| Gross | 289 |
| Longacre | 254 |

From the above it will be seen that Councilman H. Crissman is entitled to the pumpkin. A total of 4,620 votes were cast. The highest number handed in at one time was a pack of 105, handed in for Crissman, 230 votes were received for him after Friday's publication. The pumpkin contest excited considerable interest and was won fairly by the successful competitor.

'You must bear in mind at all times brethren, that faith will make you whole,' said a speaker at a religious meeting.

And just then an old sailor, with one arm and one leg gone, stood up and said he'd try some.

THE good results of the McKinley tariff bill are already apparent. Austria, Germany and Spain are tumbling over each other, so to speak, in their efforts to secure reciprocity treaties with the United States. Republican legislation always tells.

THE republicans are assured of the control of the United States Senate for years to come, and if the voters of the country do their whole duty the party will also continue to control the House of Representatives.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

That Fire Steamer.

At a special meeting of the Logan Hose Company on Friday evening, at which an agent of the Sillsby Fire Steamer Manufacturing Company was present, it was decided and an agreement was entered into for the purchase of a Class 5, Sillsby Steamer. This is a light engine and one just suitable to these Bellefonte hills. It is warranted to throw two streams over the highest church steeple in Bellefonte or three streams over any building. It will draw water 28 feet, within five feet of the maximum distance.

The engine is to be delivered within sixty days. One thousand dollars are to be paid on delivery and the ballance on very easy payments. The reason the Company did not purchase the York engine offered for $900 was because it was too heavy entirely for Bellefonte. It would have taken four horses to haul it up these hills. The engine now bargained for is a new one and one that is light enough to be moved with ease anywhere.

ACTION and progress are synonymous with Republicanism, just as obstruction and retrogression are with democracy.

Dyspeptics will obtain much relief from the use of Melin's Food as it is well borne by an enfeebled or irritable stomach. It is a food, not a medicine, and the stomach receives the nourishment it demands for its daily needs.

Forced to Leave Home.

Over 60 people were forced to leave their homes yesterday to call at their druggist's for a free trial package of Lane's Family Medicine. If your blood is bad, your liver and kidneys out of order, if you are constipated and have headache and an unsightly complexion, don't fail to call on any druggist to day for a free sample of this good remedy. The ladies praise it. Everyone likes it. Large-size packages 50 cents.

Children Cry for Pitcher's Castoria.

—The Bellefonte Silver Cornet Band marched to the abode of P. Gray Meek on Friday and gave him a delightful serenade in honor of his nomination for State Senator. That silver-tongued, gold-lined orator James Schofield, was to have delivered a fitting address but we have not yet heard whether he did or not.

A Victory Won Too Late.

A Detroit wholesale house sent an agent into one of the northern counties the other day to investigate and report on the failure of a dry-goods man whose assets were below zero. The bankrupt was perfectly willing to explain how it all happened.

'You see,' he said, 'I got married about two years ago. Up to that time the postmaster and his wife had been at the head of society here and run the ranch. He had the only swallow-tail coat and she the only silk dress in the town.'

'I see.'

'We had to make a lead for the head, and I bought my wife a $12 bonnet and a diamond ring.'

'Yes.'

'The postmaster bought his wife a broncho pony and a pair of diamond ear-rings.'

'Yes.'

'Then I subscribed $200 to a new church, gave two lawn parties, and bought a top carriage and a pacer.'

'Yes.'

He came up smilingly with a new brick house, a progressive euchre party and gave $250 to the heathen of Africa.

I see.

Well, I had gone in to smash him or lose a lung, and so I pledged myself for the preacher's salary for a year, lost $400 on a deal in wheat, kept two hired girls, bought three Persian rugs, backed a barber shop, took a half interest in our home newspaper, and presented every church in town with a ball.

That must have laid him.

It did. He threw up his hands and surrendered, but when you fellows in Detroit drew on me at three days' sight I was dished. I'm sorry it happened, but you can't blame me. If that postmaster hadn't made a fool of himself I'd have been able to pay 150 cents on the dollar.

IN MEMORIAM.

The Centre County Bar Takes Action on the Death of Judge Linn.

A meeting of the bar was held in the Court House on Thursday afternoon to take action on the death of Ex-Judge Samuel Linn, of Williamsport. Col. D. S. Keller called the meeting to order and ex-Governor Curtin was made chairman and Clement Dale, Esq., secretary. On motion the following named gentlemen, members of the Centre County bar, were appointed a committee to attend the funeral, which will take place in Williamsport to-morrow, Saturday, afternoon: Gov. Curtin, James H Rankin, Col. D S Keller, E M Blanchard and Hon. John B Linn. The Associate Judges of the county were also invited to accompany the party to Williamsport.

A committee on resolutions, composed of the following gentlemen, was appointed; Hon John B Linn, James H Rankin and J C Meyer. While the meeting was waiting on the report of the committee on resolutions appropriate remarks were made by Col. D S Keller and Mr. E C Humes. The committee on resolutions reported the following:

Hon. Samuel Linn died at his residence in the City of Williamsport, at 8 a m, October 14, 1890, in the 71st year of his age. He was born on his father's farm adjoining Bellefonte, (now owned by Mrs. Reuben Valentine) on the 20th day of February, 1820.

His grandfather, Rev. John Linn, was born six miles south of the site of Gettysburg in what is now Adams county, in the year 1749, graduated at Princeton in the class of 1773, licensed to preach by the Presbytery of Denegal in 1776, and soon after received a call from the congregation of Shearman valley, Cumberland [now Perry county] where he labored faithfully and efficiently, till he closed his ministry and his life. His wife was "Mary Getty." Her father resided on the farm on which Gettysburg is now located. Rev. John Linn died in the year 1720, in the 71st year of his age.

The Judge's father, Rev. James Linn' D. D., was born in Shearman's valley, September 4, 1783, graduated at Dickinson College [Carlisle, Pa.,] in 1805, and was ordained, and installed pastor of Lick Run and Bellefonte congregations April 17,1810,in the court house in Bellefonte which was then used as the place of worship. He married Jane Harris, daughter of James Harris, one of the proprietors of Bellefonte, February 25, 1811, by whom he had six children of whom Mrs. Jane E Welsh of Bellefonte alone survives. Samuel was the fifth child and it is remarkable that his sister [Mrs John Irwin, Jr.,] and his brothers preceded him to the tomb in the order of their birth. Dr. Linn's second wife, was Isabella Henderson,and their daughter Mrs M H Wilson, widow of William P Wilson, Esq., is the only other surviving child of Dr. Linn. Dr. Linn died in Bellefonte February 23d, 1868, after a pastorate of fifty eight years. There is a sublime eloquence in the career of such a man, and the reputation he won he bequeathed to enhance the dignity, and honor and usefulness of the profession which he adorned.

His son Samuel was educated at the Bellefonte Academy. In early life he manifested a taste for mechanics as a science, and had he been led to pursue this as a calling, he would doubtless have excelled. Restive during the progress of his education at the academy, when only fifteen years of age, he went to the State of Ohio with his uncle James D. Harris, one of the ablest civil engineers this State has produced, who was then principal engineer of the Pennsylvania and Ohio canal extending from New Castle to Akron. In March, 1836, when Mr. Harris was appointed principal engineer of the North Branch Division of the Pennsylvania canal. Samuel joined the corps of engineers and continued in the work upwards of five years, and though very young earned an enviable reputation.

He commenced reading law with the late Bond Valentine, Esq., in 1840, and after attending Judge Reed's Law School at Carlisle returning to Bellefonte and finished his course with the late Hon. J. T. Hale and was admitted to the bar of Centre county at the January term of 1843.

He opened an office in Bellefonte and in 1847 became a partner with Hon. J T Hale which firm was dissolved on the appointment of Judge Hale, President Judge of the 25th judicial district in 1851. He was married December 1, 1847, to Miss Augusta Moore, of Carlisle, and in 1856 associated his brother-in-law the late W P Wilson, Esq., in practice which continued until the Judge's election to the Bench.

In 1857 Mr. Linn published his "Analytical Index Reference to the Cases Ad justed in the Several Courts of Pennsylvania," a work involving an immense amount of labor and of incalculable value to the profession in the preparation of causes. Hon. G Sharswood, afterward Chief Justice of Pennsylvania, said of it: 'To be able to ascertain almost at a glance, whenever a case is cited, the extent of its authority, will make it an essential vade mecum of the practitioner; while to the student, the counsel and the judge to be thus assisted by reference to all future cases in which the principal case has been cited and relied on as authority, commented on, explained, qualified, doubted, shaken or overruled, will so materially assist legal investigation that its importance can hardly be overestimated.

Hon. James Burnside, President Judge, died in office July 1, 1859, and Hon. James Gamble, of Jersey Shore, was appointed July 15, 1869, to fill the vacancy and was nominated by the Democratic judicial conferrees for the full term and the Republican county convention, recommended Samuel Linn. Judge Linn, at the October election of 1859, carried Centre county by a majority of 729 votes. Judge Gamble's majorities in Clearfield and Clinton counties were 171 and 97, respectively, and Judge Linn's majority in the judicial district was, therefore, 461 votes, a remarkable evidence of his popularity in a district overwhelmingly Democratic.

As a judge his charges to the jury were clear and explicit; his decisions were marked by general acquiescence and his sentences were just, but he was not satisfied with himself in the position and resigned the office in May, 1868. He then resumed the practice of law at Bellefonte, in co-partnership with Hon. A. O. Furst, which continued until Judge Linn's removal to Williamsport in 1869.

As an ejectment lawyer he had no superior in Pennsylvania. He was one of the most eloquent of advocates. His eloquence was not of manner or of action, but of thought clothed in the most beautiful, appropriate and expressive language; eloquence brightened by his wit and enlivened by his humor, of which he had an inexhaustible fund.

While a law student at Carlisle he became a member of the Presbyterian church, and after his return to Bellefonte was successively teacher and superintendent of the Sabbath school, and was elected and served as an elder of the Presbyterian church of Bellefonte, often representing it in the higher assemblies of the church.

Inheriting the musical abilities of his father, Judge Linn had an exquisite taste for music. He composed songs and sang them with a melodious voice; he was a fine performer on many musical instruments.

Socially he was highly esteemed as a delightful companion, and a kind-hearted, honest man. He had been an invalid for over a year and death came to him as a sweet release. Yet

> Alas! for the clasp of a vanished hand,
> And the sound of a voice that is still."

Of his immediate family Judge Linn leaves to survive him his wife, sons Harry, of Pittsburg; Claudius, of Williamsport; Herbert of Georgia; Mrs. Mary Hemmingway, New Jersey; Annie wife of Dr. Howard Cheney, Williamsport and Miss Blanche also of Williamsport.

Matrimony Measured.

In 1888, thirteen per cent. of all the men married in Pennsylvania married women older than themselves. Eighty per cent, married them younger than themselves and the remaining seven per cent. took wives of their own ages. The average of the men was twenty-seven years and the woman twenty-three and more women at twenty-one. This seems the favorite time. A woman of fifty-nine married a man of thirty-one and a girl of twenty-three took an old man of seventy-four. The youngest couple who ventured into matrimony was a boy seventeen and a girl of fifteen. One man of fifty-four married a girl of eighteen. His age was just three times hers; and a man of forty-eight took a girl of seventeen. Where the men are older, the difference in ages varies, but where the women are older, it rarely exceeds five years. Two boys of sixteen were married, and two graybeards of 80 tried the same thing probably not for the first time. Of 14,726 women married, whose ages were given, 4,065, or 27.5 per cent. were less than twenty years old.

Who Can Tell.

Our exchanges are publishing the following:

Every time a cow moves her tail to switch a fly she exerts a force of three pounds. In the course of a summer a single cow wastes 5,000,000 pounds of energy. The cows of America throw away power enough to move every piece of machinery in the world. This is exclusive of kicking milkmaids off the stools.

Now, what we would like to know is how many pounds of energy and feet of gas will a politician waste in one season by the wagging of his tongue when asking for votes and trying to convince the guileless innocent that he is better than the other fellow?

Fell off the Train.

On Tuesday evening as the special train from the Delamater meeting at Bellefonte was nearing Linden Hall, Mr. Samuel Davis, of that place, fell from the platform of the car while the train was in motion and landed along side the track. He was seen in his descent and the train stopped and brought him to Linden Hall. He was severely bruised, but fortunately no bones were broken. It is supposed he sustained internal injuries. Mr. Davis is a man well up in years, and it is hoped he will survive the shock.—Centre Reporter.

Of Senator Moody and his Work.

It was our pleasure to have an agreeable talk with Mr. Milliken during his stay with us on the subject of politics.

Mr. Milliken takes an active interest in politics in Pennsylvania and New York, and is one of the few men who always refuses to take office. He speaks in great praise of the work accomplished by Senator Moody during his term in the senate, for south Dakota. Through him, and principally through his indefatigable zeal and constant watchfulness, he secured for this state the protection upon tin. This industry being yet so feebly developed, it required more than an argument to be used to accomplish the valuable ends attained, and Mr. Milliken fears that unless the tin enterprises ofour state are at once developed to an extent that will show to the country their value and their capabilities of supplying tin for the use of our country, the duty at present laid can hardly be maintained. He says there is apprehension throughout the country that while we have a vast quantity of the developed, the quality, it is maintained by experts at home and abroad, may prove disappointing; but he hopes to the contrary, and that the practiced operation and full development will justify his hopes.

He says that Senator Moody has made a most favorable record with and impression among the republicans of the eastern states, and in great earnestness he urges that the state of South Dakota owes to Senator Moody a debt of honor and gratitude that they can but feebly repay in returning him again to the senate.

We like to hear so earnest a republican as Mr. Milliken talk, and as he is identified with very large and most valuable interests in our state, his earnestness, his beliefs, and his hopes rest with us as keenly as though he resided here in person.—Black Hill's (Dak.) Daily Times.

The Play Last Night.

Those who failed to attend the play at the opera house last night missed one of the finest performances that can possibly be seen this season. However, a very large audience was present to hear the rendition of "Boccaccio," by the Marie Greenwood Comic Opera Company, which was simply perfect. Miss Greenwood, as "Fiammetta," is a very attractive girl but "Boccaccio" (Mamie Taylor) was simply intoxicating, and the acting of each was away up. Miss Greenwood possesses one of those sweet, rare voices that is seldom heard in comic opera and the beauty of it she knows how to use it too. Her singing was loudly applauded and frequently encored. "Boccaccio" was also a sweet singer, and deserves special mention. There are three comedians with the company and they certainly do bring down the house with their original wit and innocent fun. The chorus is large, there is an orchestra of ten pieces and the entire company is one of the most finely costumed on the roadt It is worthy of large houses wherever i goes,

Little's World.

The staging of Little's "World" is magnificent, embracing a peaceful harbor, a sinking ship on the ocean, a raft in the open sea, with its freight of human lives, and a beautiful moonlight panorama. The plot of the play opens with a boy leaving the home of childhood because of cruelty. He enlists in the United States navy as cabin boy,and for fifteen years lived a life of danger and adventure, On the coast of Italy he rescues a young American lady from the clutches of two villains, who are plotting against her life for her fortune The young "tar" and the girl are both bound for America, and are shipwrecked through the scuttling of the ship by the two villains. For many days they are buffeted about on the ocean, but they are finally rescued. At length the identity of the young people is revealed to them by accident, and they prove to be brother and sister. More persecutions and plottings follow; the sailor boy is arrested as an escaped lunatic, and the plotters take possession of his estate in America. But the clouds at length pass away, and the reunited brother and sister have their property restored to them and their enemies summarily dealt with.

Death of Mrs. McClintick.

The sorrowful announcement was made on Wednesday afternoon of the death of Mrs. D. R. McClintic which occurred that day, the result of typhoid fever. Mrs. McClintic was a daughter of Mrs. Roundtree, of this place, and was married less than two years ago. She leaves a husband and one child, a babe of ten months, to sorrow for their loss. The funeral will occur on Friday morning; the body will be taken to Mill Hall for interment. Deceased was aged about 25 years. She had been sick about three weeks.

—What's the matter with the telephone these times? You put the hand phone to your ear and whiz-z-z-z-z-z-z zip fiz-z-z-z-z buzz zip is the only thing that one can hear. It sounds as if there was a threshing machine, a saw mill, a sausage chopper and a thunder and lightning maker all combined, in the 'tarnal old thing and one expects all the time to receive a clap hard enough to knock a southern mule down.

TWO DEATHS.

Mrs. W. R. Brachbill and Mrs. C. Dale Pass Beyond the Vale of Tears.

Sad is death at all times, but thrice sad does it seem when a young and loving wife is taken from the arms of an affectionate husband by the relentless enemy, death. To-day it is our sad duty to chronicle an instance like the above in the death of Mrs. Mollie, wife of W. R. Brachbill, who died at an early hour on Friday morning from that dread disease, consumption. Mrs. Brachbill, who formerly was a Miss Powers, daughter of Mr. John Powers and sister of Mr. Ed. Powers, the shoe dealer, had been afflicted with consumption for a couple of years but it was only within the last few weeks that she was confined to her bed. Although her death was expected yet the sadness of it was not alleviated thereby.

Deceased was about 26 years of age. She leaves a husband and two small children to sorrow over their loss. The funeral took place on Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

Mrs. Kate M. Dale, wife of Mr. C. Dale, Jr., died on Friday, October 17, at 1 o'clock p. m. at her home near Pleasant Gap. Mrs. Dale was born August 7th, 1837, and was aged at the time of her death just 53 years, two months and 10 days. She had been ill for some time. The funeral occurred on Monday at 10 o'clock in the morning, interment to be made at Pleasant Gap Lutheran cemetery.

Unionville Items.

This place moves along in its usual quiet, unpretentions way undisturbed by any startling events.

The recent rains have raised the streams slightly and the miller is happy.

The merchants and mechanics of this place are busy catering to the wants of their customers.

S. B. Bathurst and lady just returned from a visit to his daughter, Jennie VanValin, at Gennett, Pa.

A number of our citizens went to Philipsburg to attend the meeting and parade of the Odd Fellows on the 15th.

Dorsey Calhoun near this place was seriously injured a few days ago by a horse kicking him in the side, though the present indications are that he will recover.

All the cases of fever yet living have nearly recovered.

Our Postmaster now keeps on hand the kind of school books used in the Borough and township for the accommodation of those wanting them.

The few frosts we have had were thawed by fog so that in some gardens vegetables are not yet injured.

P. Gray Meek Nominated.

The deadlock in the democratic Senatorial conference for this district is broken and P. Gray Meek's pole knocked the persimmons. Our illustrious editorial friend is not very big but when he starts in to get a thing—in his own] party—he goes in to win and he generally "gets there just the same."

The nomination was made at a late hour on Tuesday evening by Clearfield's conferrees voting with Centre's. Clinton's men stood by Hipple to the last and now that they failed to bring home the plum to present to their man the democrats in that county are kicking like a set of mad steers. Well, well, let them go it; it is none of the republicans' funeral anyhow, and by the time Bro. Meek gets through with it he might find that he had gotten a "pig in a poke" which when it was turned out on the morning of the fifth of next November would prove to be a—Skunk. But here's to you! Now let the republicans go to work and put up any good man and the next State Senator from this district is ours.

The Odd Fellows Demonstration.

The dedication of the new Odd Fellows Hall at Philipsburg on Wednesday was an elaborate affair. Seventy-six persons left Bellefonte, sixty from Milesburg, forty from Port Matilda and so on. The Bellefonte and Milesburg bands were along and other bands from up the valley. The parade was one of the grandest ever seen in Philipsburg, fully two thousand uniformed men being in line. The dinner and banquet were simply gorgeous and it is more than likely that there were many of the visitors who "gorged" to. All in all it was a grand affair, —For a long time we have wondered who it was that was mean and contemptible enough to come into our office while we were at dinner, tear open the papers on our desk and steal the most of them before we ever had an opportunity to look at them, but a little item in one of the town papers this morning throws considerable light on the matter. And the only thing further we have to say is that we were never so hard up that we had to go into a neighboring office and steal papers in order to get the NEWS out

Death of John F. Morrison.

A special to the DAILY NEWS from Tyrone is as follows: "Mr. John F. Morrison, proprietor of the Tyrone paper and pulp mill, died at his home in Tyrone Fridry a. m. at 2.30 o'clock. He will be buried on Monday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock in the cemetery at Tyrone.

JEWELS AND LACES.

"Oh, girl with the jewelled fingers,
Oh, girl with the laces rare!"

What are your jewels and what are your laces worth to you if, from undergoing the trying ordeals which fashionable society imposes on its devotees, enough to test the physical strength and endurance of the most robust, you break down, lose your health and become a physical wreck, as thousands do from such causes?

Under such circumstances you would willingly give all your jewels and all your laces to regain lost health. This you can do if you will but resort to the use of that great restorative known as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Thousands of grateful women bless the day it was made known to them.

For all derangements, irregularities and weaknesses peculiar to women, it is the only remedy, sold by druggists, under a positive guarantee from the manufacturers, that it will give satisfaction in every case, or money will be refunded. This guarantee has been printed on the bottle-wrapper, and faithfully carried out for many years.

An invigorating tonic, it imparts strength to the whole system. For feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon.

ELIXIR OF LIFE AND HEALTH.

Is one that promotes digestion, improves the appetite, cleanses the liver, purifies the blood, and stimulates brain and nerves without injurious reaction, and one that may be taken alike by adult or infant. Profane compounds, made of vile rum or bad whiskey, sweetened and flavored, under the titles of bitters, tonics, &c, produce effects far worse than the disease for which they are taken.

Vinegar Bitters is a pure tonic, a nervine without being narcotic, a purifier without poison, a liver tonic without purging, and above all, a life-giving stimulant without alcohol. The only medicine with such powers in the world.

Local Department.

—It rains very easy these days.

—This office is overrun with job work.

—How wintry like these mornings are?

—Prepare yourself to vote the entire republican ticket.

—The candidates are now circulating thicker and thicker.

—Little's World company went from Bellefonte to Renovo.

—The new fire steamer purchased by the Logan hose boys is a daisy.

—This is excellent weather for catching chills, colds and rain water.

—Send in your guesses and take a chance in one of the prizes offered.

—Mr. J. A. Brackbill and family, of Curwensville, are now in Bellefonte.

—The Altoona District Conference of the M. E. church is in session in Tyrone.

—The nail works, one of Bellefonte's chief industries, are now running on full time.

—Brother Meek was in Lock Haven on Tuesday looking after his political interests.

—This kind of weather is too cold for children to go barefooted. Parents should not allow it.

—Pheasants and rabbits are plenty but deer—well, deer is mighty dear, owing to scarcity of the animal.

—A druggist can compound a prescription and a banker can cempound interest, and there's lots of money in both.

—The Republican Senatorial Conference is in session in Tyrone to-day and the congressional conference met at Dubois on Tuesday.

—Miss Maggie Watt, of Rock Springs, and Miss Rosel, of Tyrone, visited at the home of Mrs. James H. Mitchell, on Spring street, recently.

—Goodness alive! what's this world coming to? In Renovo they actually clean out their lock up once a year. Why Bellefonte never does.

—In the "Hearts of New York" is a genuine patrol wagon to which is attached a lively team. It is a genuine sensation and pleases every time.

—General Hastings has just returned from Ohio, where he was working for Major McKinley, and is now in the western part of the State speaking for Delamater.

—The Prohibition County Committee run a very business-like campaign. They never contract for more work than they can pay, and they always pay promptly for what they get done.

—At the Republican congressional conference held in Dubois on Tuesday, word comes that D. P. Oyster, of Elk county, was nominated for Congress. Mr. Kribbs had better now look out as this is very good weather for Oysters.

—Misses Lizzie Shortlidge and Mary Meek returned on Saturday night from Philadelphia where they were attending a type writing school. Miss Lizzie will now enter the office of her father as a stenographer and type writer.

—It does not pay any man to wear his life out in accumulating an immense fortune. Beyond a certain limit, money is an encumbrance. At least, so it is said; as for us, well, editors never have the pleasure of finding out such things.

—From the Philadelphia Sunday Times: "George T. Bush, the Bellefonte citizen whose name covers the front of a famous hotel up that way, was in town yesterday, Mr. Bush's share in political commodities this year is small."

—B. F. Johnson & Co., whose advertisement appears in another column, have recently moved into new and larger quarters, with better facilities for conducting business than ever before. Parties wishing employment, or to more fully investigate the opportunities and advantages they offer, would do well to communicate with them promptly.

—Between the fifth and sixth acts the opera house Tuesday night the villian, Mr. T. E. Commerford, came before the footlights and thanked the people for their kind and appreciative attention and recommended the next entertainment, "The Hearts of New York," as being first class. He also spoke highly of the new opera house complimenting the owners and congratulating the theatre goer.

—Miss Mamie Jamison, daughter of Mr. William Jamison, gave a very pleasant birthday party to about twenty-five of her young friends on Monday evening, it being her twelfth birthday. The refreshments were abundant and elegant and much enjoyed by all. No one knows better than Mrs. Jamison and her daughter how to prepare and serve choice viands. After an evening spent in games, recitations and music, the young folks departed to their homes much delighted with their entertainment.

DEATH'S GLEANING.

Mr. Charles Bosner Dies on Saturday Afternoon.

A very unexpected death occurred on Saturday afternoon about 4 o'clock when the spirit of Mr. Charles Bosner, of East Lamb street, took its flight from this world of sorrow, trial and trouble to pass into the great beyond. A couple months ago Mr. Bosner, who was an iron worker, went to Roanoke, Va., for employment. He worked there a short while and then owing to the unhealthy location he went to Columbia, Lancaster county, this state, where he worked for some time. Two weeks ago to-day he was on his way to Pittsburg to accept a situation in a mill at that place and when on the road he was taken sick. He went as far as Bellwood, Blair county, where he stopped off with some relatives, thinking in a day or so he would be able to proceed on his journey. He kept growing worse however, until last Tuesday when he resolved to come home.

On his arrival at his home in this place a physician was sent for and he pronounced the ailment a mild attack of quinzy. The attending physician did not apprehend any danger but the patient continued to grow worse. On Friday night he grew considerably worse and when the doctor came on Saturday morning he at once saw the man was dying. Owing to exposure and cold in the system the disease had generated into a case of blood poisoning and about 4 o'clock the end came.

Mr. Bosner was born in the village of Mainz, Germany, on the 13th day of November, 1843. He came to the United States in 1857, when he was but 14 years of age. On his arrival in New York he worked at the plumbers trade until the breaking out of the war. In 1861, when but 18 years old, he joined the 7th N.Y. Infantry and entered the army. For two years he served in his old company fighting many battles and enduring much privation. He then joined a cavalry company and for two years more, or until the close of the war, he served in that capacity. After the close of the war he served eight months in the regular army when, wishing to retire, he was given an honorable discharge. Soon after that he was married to Catherine Stoltz. To the writers knowledge were given to them, four sons and two daughters, one son dying less than a year ago. For the last few years Mr. Bosner has been engaged principally as an iron worker. They have lived in Bellefonte for several years. Deceased was a member of the Lutheran church. The funeral occurred this afternoon at two o'clock from the house.

One of the saddest parts of this sad affair was the absence of his son Willie formerly of the Western Union telegraph office in this place, but who is now in Bridgton, N. J. Not anticipating so fatal a termination he was not sent for until Saturday morning and at that time he could not start to arrive in Bellefonte that day hence he did not reach home until ten o'clock this morning. Death is the ending of all humanity, and though we all know it, yet when brought face to face with the stern reality by seeing death in ones own family it seems a terrible ending. But far beyond the yawning grave is a bright beacon light and comfort and cheer, beckoning onwards and upwards, and by looking across the freshly piled mound one can see a haven of rest and peace that, although it is heartrending to see loved ones torn away, yet there is that blessed assurance of a reunion beyond the grave

Millheim Matters.

Sunday in this place was a very wet and cold day.

Rev. W. H. Stover, the Evangelical minister, preached a very able sermon in his church on Sunday evening.

Mr. S. D. Musser come home from Philipsburg to spend the Sunday with his family in this place.

Messrs. Jerry and Milton Kern, of near Millheim, are both ill with typhoid fever.

Mrs. Dr. Stamm is slowly recovering from a recent stroke of paralysis.

Quite a number of our citizens took in the Delamater meeting in Bellefonte.

There is to be a democratic rally in this place some day this week.

Mr. Fred Kurtz, of Centre Hall, was in our town on Saturday.

Mr. A. J. Miller has had a very severe cold for a couple of weeks.

A Voice from Halfmoon Township.

EDITOR DAILY NEWS:—I noticed a short article recently concerning Guyer Mattern's liberality one winter when Scotia mines was shut down early in the season. Every word of that article was true, as the writer can bear witness. Indeed, I do not know what the men of the Scotia mines would have done during that long, hard winter if it had not been for Guyer Mattern selling them goods and waiting for his pay until their works would open in the following spring. Mr. Mattern deserves to be elected assemblymen on the republican ticket. He has always been a staunch worker for the grand cause of the Republican party; he is a man that will add strength to the ticket, not weaken it; he will carry every republican vote in this little "neck o'woods" besides a host of good, staunch democrats have given the word to support him, and he will be elected; and in Mr. Mattern the laboring man will have an untiring friend. He is genteel, kind and obliging, and in every way fit to fill the office and my opinion is that we ought to elect a man once that the citizens may know that there is a representative from good old Centre. ### Peterson's Magazine.

THERE IS A MARKED improvement in the November number of PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, which comes printed on heavier fine paper, with more abundant and superior illustrations. The contents of the number are particularly rich Among them being powerful stories by Rebecca Harding, Davis and Frank Lee Benedict; a paper on House Plants and a finely illustrated narrative descriptive of a woman's ingenuity in household decorations. The Fashion departure is rich in seasonable suggestions and illustration of pretty styles of dress, etc PETERSON is now closing its 49th year of publication. It has stood at the head of ladies periodicals all those years, and its publishers express their determination to spare no pains to keep it there. It is certainly a very interesting, helpful and entertaining periodical for the household. Terms: Two Dollars a year, with largely reduced rates to clubs. Now is the time to subscribe or form a club for 1891. Address PETERSON'S MAGAZINE, Philadelphia, Pa.

In the Council Chamber.

Council met on Monday night with six members present. There were no communications of any kind whatever. The street committee reported the sewer fixed at the alley near Munson's residence. Fire and Police committee requested council to instruct Finance committee to request Mr. Humes to cover the floor of the hose house so that the new steam fire engine could be gotten in with less trouble. Was so ordered. Market committee reported $5.00 market fee collected, Council then adjourned after which the DAILY NEWS pumpkin was presented by Mr. W. I. Swoope to the most popular councilman, which in reality was the honorable president, Mr. Samuel Gault, who received it graciously.

Dramatic Notes.

Manager A. S. Garman has secured a return date of the Marie Greenwood Comic Opera Company which will return to Bellefonte sometime in January. They will then have a packed house and no mistake.

The "Kitty Rhoads" opera company will be at Garman's opera house all of next week. This is one of the best companies on the road. It plays in Williamsport all of this week.

"The Kindergarten" will be the next comedy after the week's opera in Bellefonte. It is booked to appear on Monday, November 3. It is said to be great.

When called for please say advertised.

J. A. FIEDLER, P. M.

Drama, Comedy and Music.

"The World" is a play that needs no introduction. Neither does it need any commendation, for in the several years it has been on the boards it has commended itself, and its production at the Garman Opera House this evening will doubtless be enjoyed by theatre-goers as though it were brand new. It is one of those that seemingly never lose their charms, appealing as it does to and awakening the sympathy and stirring all he better, unselfish feelings of man. Then, again, people never tire of beautiful mechanical effects, and in 'The World' ample scope is given for the ingenuity of man to excite wonder and please the eye.

The young and nimble comedian and dancer who has in recent seasons attracted so much attention, Will E. Hines, heads the list of popular and favorite stars in "Hearts of New York," which will be presented at the opera house Friday evening. Mr. Hines is ably seconded by Miss Earl Remington, the quaint little sobrette, whose singing and acting are generally applauded everywhere and whose dancing is aptly compared to the pirouetting of some "Titania" of fairyland. Both are ably supported by a phenominal cast headed by Stanley Macey who is known as a specialist of high rank. Mr. James Quinn, who created quite a sensation with the Rice & Dikey "Adonis" company, Mr. James Witcomb, one of the sweet singers of the "Old Homestead" company, Miss Marie Dudley, late soprana of the 'American Opera' company, Miss May Marshall of Augusta Daly's New York Theatre company, besides other well known favorites. The drama itself portrays life in New York and contains more sensational and picturesque scenes and situations of the great metropolis than any play now on the road. The company carries its own scenic and mechanical effects. Interspersed throughout are bright, sparkling specialities and the latest and most popular songs with strong incidental music. The reserved seat sale now open.

The attendance at the entertainment in the rooms of the Young Men's Christian Association was so large last night that many were unable to find seats. The landings and stair-ways were occupied by scores. Madame Fry's Company exceeded anticipations. The performance was a very refined one, and the audience expressed its delight in unmeasured terms. The culture displayed in the vocal performances was equaled by the harmony of the instrumental music. Pittsburg Times.

The Madame Fry Company will appear in the Court House, Bellefonte, Next Saturday evening. Tickets on sale at the usual place.

Two Funerals.

On Monday morning at 10 o'clock the remains of Mrs. W. R. Brackbill were borne to their last resting place. The services were held in the Catholic church, of which deceased was a member. The following persons acted as pall bearers: Messrs. Corney Garman, Charles Shuey, Charles Cook, Harry Valentine, Henry Brockerhoff, Edward Brown, Joseph Ceaders, Robert Gilmore. Rev. P. McArdle officiated.

In the afternoon at 2.30 o'clock, the funeral of Mr. Charles Bosner occurred from his late residence on Lamb street. The following gentlemen acted as pall bearers: Messrs. J. A. Finkbinder, Ed. Drumel, D. M. Lieb, Benjamin Bradley, L. A. Schaffer, John Kline. Rev. Ed Everett Hoshour officiated.

Wallace, Beaver Falls, Registering apparatus for gas meters.

Edward Riggles Killed.

Edward Riggles, of Howard, Centre county, was killed on Saturday while out on a squirrel hunt. In making an effort to dislodge a squirrel from a young sapling it appears that he used the b of his gun to jar the tree, by which foolish act the weapen was discharged and the contents entered his abdomen Dr. Mothersbaugh, of Beech Creek, was summoned, but the unfortunate victim died before his arrival.

Installation Services.

On Tuesday, October 28th, installation services will be held in the Presbyterian churches at Centre Hill and Spring Mills for the purpose of installing the new pastor recently elected to that charge, Rev. Henry C. Basterville. The services at Centre Hill will be held at 10 o'clock a. m., and at Spring Mills at 1.30 p. m. and will be in the following order:

Rev. Dr. Hamill will preside and propound constitutional questions, Rev. Dr. Laurie, of Bellefonte, to preach the sermon. Rev. Dr. Hamill to make the charge to the people. Rev. George Elliot, of Bellefonte, to charge the pastor. The public generally invited.

Down at Howard.

The borough of Howard, a short distance above Lock Haven, on the Bald Eagle Valley railroad, has a couple of industrial establishments that would do credit to a much larger place. One of these is the fifth wheel manufactory, which is being enlarged and improved under the superintendency of T. A. Long, and is shortly to emerge into prominence under the style and title of the D. Wilcox Manufacturing Co., which will make fifth wheel carriage hardware and general drop forgings. Wilcox is from Birmingham, Connecticut, and was formerly of the firm of Wilcox & Howe. The planat is a valuable one, has lots of orders, and is putting up an addition at one end, and the other is also to be shortly added to:

There is also a spoke and handle manufactory run by Mr. Muffly, which appears to be doing a rushing business. It has the best and latest machinery and skilled workmen and the busy hum of the industry is heard from early morn till dewy eve. We were informed that it is the intention to make Howard a manufacturing centre and that the capital will be furnished to do it. It is a pretty town, in a beautiful country, full of neat cozy homes and is inhabited by an intelligent and prosperous people Moore's drug store and Weber's and Lucas' stores are the principal places of business, outside of the factories.

The Syracuse House, kept by Jacob DeHaas, is a comfortable place and is doing a good trade. It is a licensed house.

Personal Pencilings.

Mr. John Bullock has returned from a brief visit to Mechanicsburg.

Mr. G. S. Keller, of Houserville, transacted business in Bellefonte on Tuesday

Misses Ella and Jennie Howley, of this place, are guests of Sheriff and Mrs Leahy, of Lock Haven.

Miss Sadie Malin departed on Thursday for a brief visit with friends in Baltimore. She was accompanied as far as Harrisburg by her father, Mr. W. L. Malin.

Misses Lyda, Anna and Emma Love of near Tyrone, and who are sisters of our eminent townsman, John G. Love, Esq., departed on Saturday for Atlanta, Ga., where they will spend the winter.

The Deadwood (Dak.) Daily Pioneer thus speaks of our eminent townsman Mr. James Milliken, principle owner of the Savage tunnel and claims contiguous thereto, arrived from his Pennsylvania home yesterday. Mr. Milliken is one of those sociable, well informed gentlemen whom it is always a pleasure to meet.

Amusement Notes.

Little's World Company played to a good house on Tuesday night. The scenery exhibited was very good and realistic and the acting was fair. Some of the parts, especially that taken by "Dennis," were at times overdone. The closing acts were deserving of credit.

The "Hearts of New York," which will be presented on Friday night, October 24, is full of bright, sparkling and refined specialties. It will be presented by a company of carefully selected players. Remember—it will make you cry; it will make you laugh; it will make you scream; it will make you go into ecstacies and on the whole it will surprise you. Reserved seats now on sale.

The Madame Fry Concert Company, which is creating quite a sensation wherever it appears this season, will be in the court house on Saturday night under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Tickets 50 cents, are now on sale at the usual places. If you don't go to this concert you will miss a musical treat.

—Residents of Julian and Huston township are very much excited over the preaching of Matlock Fry a couple of Sunday evenings ago. Mr. Fry at one time, some two years and six months ago, apparently died; in other words he lay in a trance for about 18 hours and when he came to he made some predictions as to what he would do two years and six months from that time. The time came and the predictions were fulfilled and now Mr. Fry is thought to be possessed of supernatural power.

MARRIED.

THOMPSON—SHAW—At the residence of the Misses Irwin, Curwensville, Wednesday, October 15th, 1890, Mr. James I. Thompson, of Lemont, to Miss Jennie Irwin Shaw, of Clearfield, Pa., Rev. Charles Herron performing the ceremony.

THE BELLEFONTE ACADEMY.

Now Undergoing Much Needed Repairs. When Completed Will be a Handsome Structure.

For several months a committee has been at work endeavoring to raise $6,000 with which to repair and modernize the Bellefonte Academy. The money finally has all been pledged and now for about a week workmen have been busily engaged in tearing down the brick structure at the southeast corner of the main building. This wing will be entirely torn away and permanently dispensed with. The main building in the centre with the east and west wings will remain, but the roof will be raised, a cupola will be put on top and the entire building will be remodled and reconstructed throughout.

A new residence to be built of brick and three stories high, will be put up on the northeast corner of the Academy ground, for the principal's use and also for lady boarders. This building will be furnished throughout with all the modern improvements and, when completed, will present a very handsome appearance. This will remove the necessity of the principal residing in the main building, thus giving more room to the work of education.

Mr. Robert Cole, is the architect and Mr. David Bartley the contractor who will perform the work. Under two such able men, both masters in their line, the people of Bellefonte can expect to see something, not alone convenient and comfortable, but remarkably handsome when the buildings are completed. under the new plan of reconstruction the yard will be larger and of better adaptation. We are glad to see these much needed repairs commenced as the old building as it has stood for years, was perpetual disgrace to Bellefonte. First erected in 1805, it has never been remodeled since and, save for a few absolutely needed repairs of a minor character, there has never been anything done to it. Now there is a promise to see it rise in appearance a fit associate for the many other handsome buildings in Bellefonte, and for their contributions toward the result the citizens of Bellefonte deserve congratulations and thanks.

An Old Sore Healed.

I had a painful, annoying sore on my leg, near the knee, that troubled me for over two years. I tried various remedys, but the sore instead of healing up, continued to grow larger, and to cause me more pain until I began to look for a crutch. Through the advice of a friend, who was cured of a similar trouble, I took S. S. S., and in a few weeks was cured entirely. The sore healed up, and there is not even a scar left to mark the place.
